TEL AVIV — Israel, Egypt jets clashed near the Suez Canal; each side said it downed two planes. Tel Aviv's military command said its fighters blasted two Egyptian MIG 21s from the sky in a noontime air battle. A communiqué over Cairo Radio said Egyptian fighters downed two Israeli Mirage jets about 35 miles west of the Suez Canal. (Details on page 2.)

Cargo door causes "explosion"

DETROIT — A jet's cargo door blew open, causing the "explosion" that sent the crippled DC10 limping back to an emergency landing at Detroit's Metropolitan Airport Monday night, American Airlines said. Nine passengers and a stewardess were injured slightly sliding down the emergency evacuation chutes, but none required hospitalization. Officials first believed a bomb had gone off in the plane. (Details on page 2.)

China sabotages accord

STOCKHOLM — China sought to pin polluter labels on the U.S. and the Soviet Union during debate at the UN Environment Conference in Stockholm. The Chinese also repeated their earlier demand that the conference condemn U.S. war efforts in Indochina. The Peking proposals were said to be the main obstacles to accord on the conference's main document, the declaration on the human environment. The U.S. and other western nations wouldn't accept the Chinese proposals to change the carefully worded accord, sources said.

Mansfield issues warning

WASHINGTON — Mansfield warned China would fight if outsiders get too close to its borders. The Senate majority leader's comments before the Joint Economic Committee, followed by one day a Peking statement that bombing near China's borders threatened her security. In Paris, meanwhile, the Vietnamese Communists again demanded the U.S. and South Vietnam resume the regular sessions of the Paris Talks.

Satellite launched

CAPE KENNEDY — A powerful Intelsat 4 commercial communications satellite rocketed into space Tuesday to serve as a switchboard in the sky for one-third of the world around the Indian Ocean. The one and one half ton spacecraft is due to go into service late next month and complete a global network of the advanced Intelsat 4s. It will increase by five times the present spaceborne relaying capacity between Africa, Europe, Asia and Australia.

N. Vietnamese fire on refugees

SAIGON (UPI)—Vietnamese Communists opened fire with mortars Tuesday on refugees fleeing An Loc along a highway from the provincial capital which South Vietnamese troops had opened only Monday. Field reports said 12 civilians were killed and 30 wounded. The U.S. command reported Tuesday American warplanes pounded two MIG air bases on the coast of North Vietnam and knocked out a pair of railroad bridges near the Chinese border with electronically guided "smart bombs." The raids, which came within 25 miles of the Chinese border, coincided with an official Chinese warning broadcast Monday that China considers the bombing close to its frontiers "grave provocations against the Chinese people."

The Vietnam News Agency said in a broadcast that the North Vietnamese air force in coordination with ground forces in Tuyen Quang and Vinh Phu provinces of North Vietnam shot down two U.S. fighter-bombers and captured "several U.S. pilots." Field reports said Communist troops aimed a barrage of mortar fire onto Highway 13 crowded with a ragged column of about 1,000 refugees heading south from An Loc, 60 miles north of Saigon. Military sources said about 10,000 refugees had swarmed down the highway Monday after South Vietnamese troops used it to reach the provincial capital, which has been under siege by the Communists for 60 days. Allied officers said South Vietnamese troops had ousted all but a small harassing force of Communists from An Loc and around Highway 13. Col. Ross Franklin, senior U.S. adviser in the area, predicted a quick end to the siege. "I would give it a week before it's all over up there." "This will be the turning point of the offensive," Franklin said. "Once we have An Loc totally the VC (Viet Cong) won't get it again. We've decimated them here and these South Vietnamese are now really fighting well." The group that left An Loc Tuesday, mainly old men, women and children set out early in the morning after local government officials said the highway appeared safe.

Help for flood survivors

Appeal made for cash donations

RAPID CITY, S.D. (UPI)—Officials appealed for cash donations Tuesday to tide over the homeless and destitute survivors of a flash flood that ravaged this Black Hills city. Work crews sifted through mountains of debris for less-fortunate victims of the disaster. Shipments and offers of food, clothing and other supplies poured into the western South Dakota city but Pennington County Commissioner Ron Stevenson said, "Our real need at this time is for cash." "Some of these people are wiped out," he said, "and have no credit and no way to get it." Officials said donations should be sent to Jim Schneid-

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate Finance Committee completed 11 months of work on the biggest welfare and Social Security bill in history Tuesday with a decision to raise everyone's Social Security taxes next year. Ninety-six million American workers and their employers would pay additional taxes under the most thoroughgoing overhaul of the Social Security and welfare systems since the original law was enacted in 1935. The measure would boost federal spending by $17.6 billion in 1974. It would push to over $50 billion the annual outlay in Social Security payments received by one-eighth of the disabled workers and their survivors.

The committee finished work but postponed final formal approval till later. That decision will throw the controversial issue of welfare reform into the Senate after the Democrats have picked their presidential candidates next month. George S. McGovern, the likely Democratic candidate for President, has a welfare reform plan radically different than the committee's version. So does the Nixon administration. And Senate liberals will offer their own version, more liberal than the administration's. The committee bill would provide an increase of 10 per cent in Social Security benefits except for those who now receive only the minimum monthly benefits, which are $70.40 for a single person and $105 for a couple. The increase for those who get the minimum would be only 5 per cent. The committee decided to limit the increase for those recipients drawing the least benefits on grounds they were the ones who had contributed least to the system through payroll taxes. But another provision would grant a special minimum of $200 for a single person and $300 for a couple to workers who had paid Social Security taxes for at least 30 years — even if their payments into the system had been low. The Senate is virtually certain to overrule the committee and vote for a 20 per cent across-the-board increase — and the even higher withholding taxes needed to finance it. So far, 64 senators have backed a proposal which would make the increase in benefits 20 per cent. The increase in benefits would take effect June 1 and would be paid retroactively after the bill becomes law. It is not likely to show up in Social Security checks before November or December at the earliest. The committee voted to raise Social Security taxes by a maximum of $113.40 next year. People earning $10,200 a year or more would pay that much more. Workers and their employers each now pay a maximum tax of $468. This would rise to $581.40. Under present law, it was scheduled to rise next year — but only to $508.50. Workers and their employers now pay a tax of 5.2 per worker's first $9,000 of earnings — a maximum of $468 a year. Under existing law, the tax was to have increased next year to 5.65 per cent of the first $9,000 of earnings. Instead, the committee decided to make the 1973 tax 5.7 per cent of the first $10,200 of earnings — a maximum tax of $581.40. The tax for self-employed, now 7.5 per cent of the first $9,000 of earnings, would rise in 1973 to 7.95 per cent of the first $10,200. In addition, Senate Democratic Whip Robert C. Byrd, W. Va., said Tuesday he would propose a new minimum payment of $100 for a single person and $150 for a couple — an idea approved in the past by the Senate but always rejected by the House.

House bans forced school integration

HARRISBURG (UPI) — An anti-busing bill, which would end all forced school desegregation in Pennsylvania, passed the House Tuesday in a narrow margin. The vote was 104-88. The much amended bill, originally sponsored by Rep. Charles Caputo, D-Allegheny, was sent to the Senate. Legislative leaders predicted the bill will wind up in a joint House-Senate conference committee. Gov. Milton J. Shapp threatened to veto it. Black legislators said the bill was based on "bigotry." It would strip the Human Relations Commission (HRC) of its power to order desegregation in schools. Instead, the HRC would serve only as an advisor in segregated schools. "If we destroy the Human Relations Commission, we destroy America," said Rep. Earl Vann, D-Philadelphia, a black lawmaker. "What we do here today will set the pattern of legislative bodies all over the nation to return to hatred, bigotry, fear, racism and all other elements of a society that has dreams of retrogression and not of forward progress. If passed, it would be a return to another civil war in America." House Majority Leader K. Leroy Irvis, D-Allegheny, also black, closed the hour-long debate on the bill with a softspoken speech that drew applause. "What we are discussing here today is not this bill," Irvis said. "We aren't discussing busing. We are discussing a matter of hypocrisy." "There are some men and women here who believe this is the way to go. There are some others who believe this will get votes for them back home. You and I have an obligation to lead, not to run and catch up." Irvis said busing is a "problem of the 40's." "The problem of the 70's is where people must live and where people must work. When you solve this, you won't have to worry about busing."

Soviet-American arms pact sent to Congress for vote

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon sent the Soviet-American arms agreements to Congress Tuesday with disclosure that the United States would consider withdrawing from the ABM treaty if further curbs on offensive weapons are not imposed within five years. The disclosure was contained in a hitherto secret statement of the U.S. position made by ambassador Gerard C. Smith, the chief American negotiator at the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks (SALT) at Helsinki on May 9.

The statement, a unilateral U.S. "interpretation" not subscribed to in writing by the Russian side, was forwarded to the House and Senate along with copies of the SALT treaty on antiballistic missiles (ABM) and the five-year interim agreement limiting offensive missiles. President Nixon urged early approval of the accords as serving the best interests of both countries. He warned that, contrary to permitting cuts in defense spending as demanded by some Democrats, the agreements will require "a sound strategic modernization program to maintain our security and to ensure that more permanent and comprehensive arms limitations can be reached."

In his unilateral statement of

May 9, Smith declared that "if an agreement providing for more complete strategic offensive arms limitations were not achieved within five years, U.S. supreme interests could be jeopardized." "Should that occur, it would constitute a basis for withdrawal from the ABM treaty. The U.S. does not wish to see such a situation occur, nor do we believe that the USSR does." The documents forwarded to Congress did not note any Soviet reaction to this position. But they listed one unilateral Soviet statement, made by Deputy Foreign Minister Vladimir Semenov on May 17 and repeated nine days later — the same day Nixon signed the agreements with Soviet leaders in Moscow.

Sen. McGovern closer to first ballot victory

OTTAWAY NEWS SERVICE WASHINGTON — Sen. George McGovern is within 126½ votes of winning the Democratic presidential nomination, according to the National Observer's fourth delegate count. And, says the Observer, he should have no trouble picking up the rest—even without Sen. Muskie's help. McGovern is so close to locking up the nomination that Connecticut's John Bailey, the veteran state chairman, or Hawaii's Gov. John Burns could put him over the top. Bailey has 20 votes in his pocket; Burns, 15. A conservative Observer count awards McGovern 245 of New York's 278 votes, but the expectation is that McGovern should win 25 more. Beyond that, 30 of Muskie's votes in Illinois are ready to switch to McGovern, whatever the senator from Maine says. And 68 more votes are just waiting to be plucked off in Louisiana, New Jersey, Ohio, Texas, Delaware, Colorado, Arizona, Idaho, Pennsylvania, and Utah. Add this all together — it comes to 123—and McGovern is just 3½ votes short of locking up the nomination. Enter chairman Bailey and Governor Burns.

Official admits fixing at Pocono Downs

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL WILKES-BARRE — The president of a syndicate which sponsors thoroughbred racing at Pocono Downs said Tuesday he did not dispute allegations that races at major East Coast tracks are fixed. Pocono Downs was one of 20 tracks named by an admitted horse race fixer who told the House Crime Committee that Eastern tracks are being controlled by use of illegal drugs and collusion by jockeys and trainers. "I would not argue with his testimony," Louis Feldmann, a Hazleton lawyer who heads Shamrock Racing Associates said. "I used to be a district attorney and I know that there are no limits to what men can invent when there's money involved." Feldmann said that the national Thoroughbred Racing Assn. is responsible for preventing fixed races. "The TRA and its collateral organization, the Thoroughbred Racing Protective Bureau, are organized for the purpose of preventing this sort of thing," he said. "So far as I can determine, in three years of operation we have had about five or six cases of horses being disqualified because of drugs," Feldmann added. He said that all but two of the cases involved the use of an analgesic which can be legally applied to horses' feet but which cannot be administered internally.

The House committee witness, identified as Bobby Byrne, appeared under heavy security guard as the committee continued its hearings into organized crime's activities in sports. He previously had been mentioned only as a mysterious "Mr. X." The committee did not identify him further except as a "horse racing specialist." Byrne noted in his testimony that "I've been out of the business for six or seven months." He did not explain further. Besides Pocono Downs, Byrne implicated Suffolk Downs, Lincoln Downs, Narragansett, Laurel, Tropical Park, Aqueduct, Hialeah, Dover Downs, Garden State, Churchill Downs, Shennandoah, East St. Louis, Rockingham, River Downs, Liberty Bell, Bowie, Fairmont Park and Pimlico. Byrne said that the fixing activities included "just about every track on the East Coast from Florida to Maine." Initially, he testified, the operation involved enticing trainers and jockeys to hold their horses back from winning, but that later he and his colleagues switched almost exclusively to using a depressant drug on the entries.

Byrne said they did not stimulate horses to win since winning horses are checked for drugs. Rather, he said, the fixers would drug as many as eight of 10 horses in a race with depressants, then place their bets on the remaining two. "They don't check the losers," he said. "They only check the winners." The witness said the ring's efforts were directed primarily at multi-betting races such as the perfecta, where money is involved in the payoff. In a perfecta, a bettor must pick both the first and second place horses. Byrne said he and the others drugged the horses by getting into the stable area at the tracks early the day before and administering the drug with a hypodermic needle. He said the depressant was so effective that "I could administer this drug to Riva Ridge and a wagon horse could beat him." Riva Ridge was the winner of this year's Kentucky Derby and Belmont. "We all see these suckers at the race track . . . not knowing nothing," Byrne testified. "It's unbelievable how bad it is." "I wouldn't go to the track today if there was only one horse running."

Irvis predicts massacre

HARRISBURG (UPI)—House Majority Leader K. Leroy Irvis predicted Tuesday the nation will witness a "black massacre" within the next decade if the Supreme Court does not take a tough stand on civil rights.

Irvis, the highest ranking black man in state government, said the court's decision against him on Monday indicated it would not take such a stand.

The implications for the future have made him consider leaving the country.

The high court overturned several lower decisions and said a Harrisburg Moose Lodge had the right to refuse to serve him and still retain its state license to sell liquor.

"I don't want people to think I'm ready to quit the country because I lost a case," the Pittsburgh Democrat said in an interview. "But I'm fearful it might trigger a series of decisions. I don't think they realize the implication of this."

Irvis said he was particularly concerned that the court would uphold the right of suburban communities to maintain segregated housing patterns.

"If that happens, the cities are going to become poorer, blacker and more desperate," he said. "The blacks will lash out first at themselves like they did during the riots where their own homes were destroyed."

"But then, because they are more than animals, they will look to see who the oppressors are. They will lash out again, and it's going to lead to bloodshed and eventually a black massacre, because the whites will overpower with more police, more guns, more troops."

Danger to population cited

State tries to block power plant

TRENTON, N.J. (UPI)—The state of Pennsylvania, trying to block a nuclear generating plant on Newbold Island in the Delaware River, said Tuesday an accident at the site could endanger millions of people.

Pennsylvania called on the Atomic Energy Commission's (AEC) safety and licensing board to deny the construction permit for the plant sought by the Public Service Electric and Gas Co. of New Jersey.

The board concluded the opening phase of its lengthy public hearing on the license request and began taking testimony from expert witnesses.

Pennsylvania Assistant Attorney General Frank Clokey said the plant would jeopardize the safety of residents of the entire Philadelphia metropolitan area. Newbold Island is five miles south of here and 11 miles north of Philadelphia.

"Newbold Island will unnecessarily endanger the health and safety of the citizens of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, and we'll oppose the plant until it can be shown that these dangers won't exist," Clokey said.

He added that in the event of a nuclear accident "evacuation of the population could not be accomplished in a satisfactory manner."

The state of New Jersey has not yet decided whether to oppose construction of the plant, according to Deputy Attorney General William Gural. He said the state will present its case to the AEC by July 11.

A representative of Congressman Edwin B. Forsythe, R-N.J., Michael Matteo of Cherry Hill, testified that the island is two miles south of a major air route, with as many as 148 flights a day, and that a plane crash might rupture the nuclear reactors and allow radioactive material to escape.

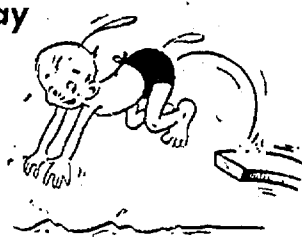

A Levittown woman, Mrs. Jean Carmichael of the Concerned Citizens on Nuclear Power, said she knows of scientists and engineers who are opposed to the plant but who will not testify for fear of losing their jobs. She cited the case of a Drexel University professor, who she did not name, who wanted to testify but changed his mind because Public Service Electric and Gas contributes money to the university.

Egyptian, Israeli airplanes clash

By United Press International

Egyptian and Israeli warplanes battled above the Mediterranean sea north of the Suez Canal Tuesday, and each side claimed two enemy planes were shot down. It was the first such aerial clash since the Middle East cease-fire became effective 22 months ago.

Military reports from Cairo and Tel Aviv gave conflicting details, indicating there may have been two separate dog-fights.

Egypt claimed eight of its Soviet-made MIG-21 interceptors tangled with 16 Israeli Mirages in Egyptian airspace north of the coastal resort of Ras-El Barr at 4:20 p.m. (9:20 a.m. EDT). It said two of the French-built Israeli Mirages were shot down and two others damaged. Two Egyptian planes were damaged by Israeli fire, the Egyptian report said, but it did not indicate whether its own planes crashed or limped back to base.

The Israeli report said a patrol of American-built Israeli F4 Phantoms was intercepted at noon (6 a.m. EDT) off the northwestern coast of the occupied Sinai peninsula, 25 miles north-northeast of Port Said, an Egyptian outpost on the northern tip of the Suez Canal. The Israeli military spokesman said two Egyptian MIG-21s were shot down, their pilots were seen parachuting into the sea, and all Israeli planes returned safely to base.

The distance between the sites specified by the two countries as the battle areas is about 25 miles, which the planes involved can cover in about one minute.

The aerial battle was the first between Egyptian and Israeli planes since July 30, 1970, eight days before the cease-fire agreement on the Suez Canal front became effective. In the 1970 battle, Israel claimed to have shot down four Egyptian MIG-21s without a loss, and Egypt claimed to have shot down on Israeli Mirage without losing a plane.

"We're not looking to break the cease-fire," said an Israeli military source in Tel Aviv. "Look who's looking for trouble. It's certainly not us."

IRA cease-fire plan rejected

BELFAST (UPI)—The militant wing of the Irish Republican Army (IRA) Tuesday offered to call a one-week cease-fire in Northern Ireland, but British Secretary of State William Whitelaw rejected its terms.

The IRA Provisional wing said it would call the cease-fire if Whitelaw agreed with its leaders to discuss a three-point peace plan.

Religious Woodstock

100,000 attend Explo '72

DALLAS (UPI)—From every direction they came—in cars, buses, airplanes, campers. Some rode their bicycles from California. Some walked. Others hitchhiked.

They flooded hotels, motels, college dormitories and private homes. They pitched their tents and unhooked their trailers.

More than a hundred thousand of them

—teen-agers, young adults, infants and the elderly—came to Texas to be a part of Explo '72, the "Religious Woodstock."

Ed and Mimi Barre of North Hollywood, Calif., set up an improvised playground in front of Market Hall to entertain their two children—Madeline, 5, and Michael, 2.

"I think Explo is going to revolutionize the world and I want to be a part of it," Mrs. Barre said Tuesday as she played skip-rope with Michael.

The purpose of Explo, sponsored June 12-17 by the Campus Crusade for Christ, is to teach everyone who comes how to spread the gospel.

Evanglist Billy Graham is honorary chairman. The young delegates spread across Dallas, talking religion with anyone who would listen.

Market Hall was the place where the delegates converged. They learned there where they were to stay for the rest of the week, what was planned for them to do. Inside they were given information packets, name badges and little bracelets resembling the kind given to hospital patients.

"I think these are the last days and this is the last generation before the second coming of Christ," Mrs. Barre said. "I think this is a way a lot of people feel and why they have come to Explo."

Nearby, her husband, a captain in the Air Force stationed in Nebraska, threw a frisbee with Madeline.

"I think a lot of people feel Jesus has changed their lives and want to share what he has done for them, but they don't know how and have come to Explo to find out," she said.

Open door causes 'explosion'

DETROIT (UPI)—The "explosion" that sent a crippled DC10 jetliner limping back to an emergency landing at Detroit's Metropolitan Airport Monday night was caused by a cargo door blowing open, American Airlines officials said Tuesday.

The jetliner was gaining altitude after taking off from the airport en route to Buffalo, N.Y., and was at 12,000 feet over southern Ontario when the door blew out in the fuselage below the passenger cabin.

Piloted by Capt. Bryce E. McCormick, a 28-year veteran, the DC10 returned to Metropolitan Airport with 56 passengers and a crew of 11 aboard.

With one of three engines turned off because of its proximity to the ruptured cargo hatch, no rudder to control the craft, no brakes to stop it, McCormick brought the $23 million jetliner in for an emergency landing, finally stopping as the plane rolled off the runway.

Nine passengers and a stewardess were injured slightly sliding down the emergency evacuation chutes, but none required hospitalization.

McCormick urged the passengers to get a safe distance from the aircraft, thinking the "explosion" might have been caused by a bomb.

The return of the shorter jacket in a super-costume of beige double knit wool with patterned bodice designed by Belle Saunders for Abe Schrader. The look is a continuation of the separates look that is really one-piece.

Shades of the 50's — the wrap trench coat in camel hair, double breasted and cinched with a self belt for extra dash in this Jaeger collection worn over wider, lined camel pants with a high turtle neck sweater.

Neo-shirtwaist dinner gown from Nat Kaplan is an example of the new trend in sleeves in the dolman. Made of clinging black matte jersey it features a dramatic woven abstract design to emphasize those new sleeves.

The Slim Gourmet

By BARBARA GIBBONS

Are you eating more and enjoying it less? Maybe you're overweight because you really don't enjoy food!

Now that may seem like a ludicrous statement . . . after all, anyone who lugs around 25 or 50 pounds of food-induced flab certainly likes to eat. But "eating" is not synonymous with "enjoyment."

"Enjoyment" is as natural and vital a food component as protein or niacin or vitamin C. If you don't get your full measure of pleasure from food, you'll always leave the table hungry. Many chronically overweight people seem to have an impaired ability to derive enough "enjoyment" from a normal-size meal. Part of the problem is that they never really learned how to enjoy!

If you'd like to eat less, try enjoying food more. Here are some tips for sharpening up your "enjoyment" skills:

— Concentrate on what you're eating. Savor every bite. Note the contrast of textures, the blending of flavors. Train your taste buds to single out spices and seasonings — the way a musical ear pinpoints instruments in an orchestra.

— Don't make food compete with a book or TV for your attention. Why dilute the pleasure of eating? Some people can become so absorbed in a book at lunchtime they can't remember what they ate. No wonder they're still hungry!

— Dinner-table conversation should be light and unprovoking. For the ultimate enjoyment, make the food itself the topic. Save heavy decision-making discussions for coffee time. Avoid the "business lunch" if possible. If you must negotiate over lunch, eat sparingly. You won't enjoy the food, anyway.

— Eat slowly and deliberately, extracting full enjoyment from every single, last bite! Overweights are often "gobblers," looking around for more while their table mates are still on their first helping.

— Never eat standing up! Food on foot has a way of "not counting" . . . almost as if gravity could carry the calories out your toes! If you must eat between meals, set a place at the table, sit down and enjoy. You'll eat less at dinner.

— Treat yourself, but not to calories! If you can't afford something fattening, make it expensive! If you can't afford the cost, make it something complicated . . . and make it yourself!

— Plan ahead! Anticipation is part of enjoyment. Knowing that there's a luscious lunch waiting will get you past coffee break without donuts. A

Volunteers find ways to brighten center

CHERRY VALLEY — An increasing number of volunteer groups are working with the children at the Pocono Developmental Center for the Retarded in Cherry Valley, but more volunteers are needed, it was announced at the meeting of the advisory board of the center.

The efforts of volunteer groups were acknowledged by the board.

Wyckoff's Women's Club gave Easter toys, donated drapes, have helped with the playground and remember individual birthdays.

Church groups have also been active. St. Paul's Lutheran Women made 36 bibs for the center. The young people of St. Paul's Lutheran, St. John's Lutheran, Scotrun, and St. Mark's Lutheran, Appenzell, entertained and bought toys.

The women of the Cherry Valley and Poplar Valley Methodist Churches held a holiday party, repaired toys for the children and also made drapes. The East Stroudsburg Methodist Youth Fellowship bought gifts and served refreshments.

The Monroe County Assn. for Retarded Children gave a holiday party and Youth PARK provided entertainment, gave a party and helped with activities.

Parties and activities were also provided by the Margaret E. Club, the IU organization, Cub Scouts and Girl Scouts.

Just Between Us—

It doesn't seem that long ago when my mother was going to my piano recitals. And here I was going to my granddaughter's first. And, you know, they haven't changed all that much.

Especially the need for new shoes. Since Jennifer's feet don't even reach the pedals, shoes might seem extraneous, but that's ignoring the fact that at this time of year, all children have outgrown their good patent leathers, outworn their school shoes and graduated into sneakers for summer.

However, there were differences. Somewhere Jennifer got the idea that a recital piece was in the same category as Christmas and birthday presents and should come as a surprise. So she would only run through her final practice, if I went outside where I couldn't hear it.

If you remember, it was cold outside over the weekend so I took refuge in the car, amused but shivery. And at the

MUNTZ IS COMING

How about recycling some fashions?

STROUDSBURG — If you didn't stop believing in fashion forecasts the year they told you short skirts were OUT or pants were OUT or the midi was IN, you may be interested in the conclusions reached at the New York Couture Business Council's 59th press week in New York last week.

Fashion pronouncements are far less dogmatic these days anyway, although the Couture statement "The Fall '72 woman's fashion hero is more likely to be Ralph Nader than any designer" may be swinging a little too far in the opposite direction.

It's true that "planned obsolescence" is as irritating in clothes as in other fields, and the ideal of "fashion that can be re-cycled" is an appealing one.

On the other hand, while women like their favorite dresses to stay in style indefinitely, they sometimes like a new dress to look new in other ways besides a new color.

The newest look for fall is probably in the dolman sleeve. Before anyone could recycle that one, they'd not only have to have saved a dress from the 1930's but also saved the figure that fit into it then.

Sleeves are sort of in the spotlight in any event with raglan sleeves, layered sleeves, kimono sleeves and cap sleeves.

Of course to go over all that coats are changing, too, away from the skinny fit and into great coats with fur collars and cuffs, wrap-around camelhair coats.

However, the fact that the fall shape is loosening up with flaring toppers and un-fitting dresses like the chemise and the smock together with the shorter skirts does help with recycling those more recent dresses women reluctantly put in the back of the closet when waistlines, belts and below-the-knee styles came in.

It may even be possible to recycle some of those fall suits with waistlength jackets that went out of style before they were out. The new waistlength or rib cage jacket has a full blouse shape with wide sleeves.

Obituaries

Leroy C. Fox

EASTON — Leroy C. Fox, 62, of Morgan Hill Road, Easton R.D. 4, died Tuesday morning at his home. He was the husband of Elma (Kerbaugh) Fox, at home.

Born in Easton, he was a son of the late Clarence D. and Mayme (Brown) Fox. He was employed as a production scheduler at the West Easton plant of the Ingersoll-Rand Co. for 21 years before retiring in March of last year.

He was a U.S. Army veteran of World War II, a member of Williams Township Fire Co., and a member of St. John's Lutheran Church, Easton.

In addition to his widow, he is survived by two brothers, William H., of Easton R.D. 4, and Charles D., of Rosetta Falls; a sister, Mrs. Franklin T. Oldt, of Easton R.D. 1; a nephew and a niece.

Funeral services will be held at 11 a.m. Friday from the Strunk Funeral Home, Easton.

Burial will be in the Presbyterian Church Cemetery, Holland, N.J.

In lieu of flowers, the family requests that memorial donations be given in his name to the American Cancer Society, 265 East Broad St., Bethlehem.

and the programs or agencies with which they will work are the following:

Stephen James, EDCNP; Kristine Grabiec, Tocks Island Regional Advisory Council; Patricia Kearn, Catholic Youth Center; and Ann Eardenberger, Pocono Mountains Vacation Bureau.

Also, Susan Horn, Schuylkill County Tourist Promotion Agency; Michael Donahue, Carbon-Schuylkill Industrial Development Corporation; and Ralph Zito, Hidden Valley Historical Society.

The goals of the leadership program are to encourage young people to stay in the area by helping them develop their potential as leaders, to familiarize them with the developmental problems and potentials in northeastern Pennsylvania, and to involve youth directly in the developmental process.

The program is funded through an Appalachian Regional Commission Grant, college work-study funds and local appropriations.

Howard J. Grossman, executive director of the EDCNP, said, "I've been impressed with the talents of northeastern Pennsylvania youth and after observing the work of these youth leadership interns last summer, we are convinced that they can help tremendously in mobilizing the talents and resources that will make northeastern Pennsylvania the best region in the Commonwealth and perhaps the nation."

The students will be assigned to an organization to work, under the direction of their college supervisors, on a research project assigned to them by the organization.

Students will work for the organization four and a half days a week with a half day set aside for a structured class at the school headed by a faculty advisor.

An end result of the summer internship will be a description of the research project, which will be submitted to the individual college for college credits.

William Desiak, of EDCNP, project coordinator said, "From the 140 requests for interns which the council received, EDCNP selected those agencies which would offer to the students a meaningful working-learning experience in terms of the students' academic background and interests."

Students will be assigned to planning agencies, industrial development groups, health and welfare agencies, the Governor's Justice Commission and other agencies.

Individuals forced to combat destructive gypsy moths

BY SKIP TAGGART
Pocono Record Reporter

STROUDSBURG — Contrary to popular belief, the gypsy moth is absolutely harmless to trees, shrubbery and other leaf bearing plants.

The gypsy moth caterpillar, however, is another story. Emerging from its egg mass in late May through early June, it remains relatively dormant for about a week and then begins to stuff itself with virtually any kind of leaf or bit of foliage available.

Monroe County District Forester John Bitzer said the insect is highly indiscriminate about its meals as opposed to normal moth or butterfly caterpillars, which are somewhat more selective of what type greenery they eat.

Bitzer also confirmed the gypsy moth egg mass contains as many as 500 eggs, much more than a conventional moth or butterfly would lay. This, combined with the insatiable appetite of the gypsy caterpillars, makes for the defoliation threat they now pose to the northeastern United States in epidemic proportions.

Emergency legislation passed in Pennsylvania at the beginning of this year provided for aerial spraying of "high use and high value" areas which has already been implemented in Monroe County and is nearing completion in Pike County.

The district forester responded to queries from private landowners about why the acreage near them was sprayed but theirs wasn't by saying, "campgrounds, resorts, recreation areas and other places where people and caterpillars come together were sprayed."

"The emergency legislation only provided for 23,000 acres across the state to be sprayed. In Monroe County about 8,000 acres were sprayed although we have about 300,000 acres of forestland in the county."

He pointed out the only time during the lifespan of the caterpillar which it is susceptible to the spray is between the time it begins to eat until it pupates, or goes into its pupa to develop into a moth — a span of approximately three or four weeks. Spraying before this period or after it would be futile since Dytol and Sevin, the two chemical sprays implemented, are stomach poisons.

Leaves poisoned

Poison may be an awesome word but that's what it is to the caterpillars when they eat the leaves that have been treated with either chemical. Laboratory tests have proven, however, that both sprays have little toxic effect on other beneficial insects and wildlife species.

Bitzer noted that both these chemicals were not solely developed to combat the gypsy moth caterpillar but have been used extensively as agricultural insecticides for some time. It was discovered they could be applied to the current defoliation problem with marked success and were adapted for that use.

Individual's tactics

Above and beyond contracting private landscapers and extermination firms, Bitzer suggested a more direct, economical and physical approach to the problem. "Squash them"

While that method may be highly effective, there are also other avenues which the squeamish or more humane resident may wish to pursue.

A strip of burlap tied around a tree trunk and then lapped over provides shade the caterpillars begin to seek when the leaves of the tree do not protect them from the sunlight. They sink down the tree to evade the sun and take shelter under the burlap flap.

In the late afternoon the landowner can raise the flap and find many caterpillars hiding there and squash to his heart's delight or just knock them from the tree into a can of gasoline, whichever.

Trapping or killing the adult moths has the long range effect of cutting down on future populations since only the male gypsy moth can fly, thus eliminating him from fertilizing any eggs. With each egg mass containing about 500 eggs, half of them — potentially females, the less fertilized the better.

In the pupa stage, the females are noticeably larger than males. They are dark brown in color, about three quarters of an inch long and resemble the thorax section of a huge wasp. They pupate in protected areas such as forks of trees, the underside of branches and the like and, if found in this state, can be just as easily done away with as mentioned before.

Bitzer remarked that while he receives daily phone calls from people who believe if they don't have their property sprayed all is lost, he would like to see more popular concern for the long range fight against the insect through laboratory developments.

"There is a kind of wasp, a very small wasp, that lays its eggs in the gypsy moth egg masses. The wasp eggs feed on the moth eggs but can only penetrate a few layers into the mass. Even so, that would cut down on about 25 per cent of the eggs that survive," he said.

"This year our new laboratory was only able to produce a couple of hundred thousand wasps but for the program to be effective we're talking about millions, not thousands."

Bitzer was not sure about a spraying program for next year, saying he has to wait for some kind of decision from the Department of Environmental Resources. So until that decision comes, moth haters everywhere should put their best foot forward — and bring it down on a caterpillar.

This photo shows the effectiveness of a burlap "skirt" used to lure gypsy moth caterpillars from their leafy habitat. Monroe County District Forester John Bitzer says this is about the only way for private landowners to relieve defoliation problems short of costly commercial exterminators.

'Meals on wheels' unit elects committee officers

EAST STROUDSBURG — A slate of officers for the Meals on Wheels Committee of the General Hospital of Monroe County has been elected to help guide the formation of a Meals on Wheels program to serve the Pocono Mountains area.

Officers elected were Mrs. William T. Wells, Stroodsbury, chairman; Rev. Lawrence Kelm, Mt. Pocono, vice chairman; Arthur Weglein, administrator of Strood Manor, treasurer, and Miss Thelma C. Shaw, Stroodsbury, secretary.

William E. Treible, director of development at the hospital, reported that the M.W. Wood Co., the hospital's food service, would be able to prepare food for the program at a cost of $1.50 per day per client. Included would be a hot lunch and a bag containing staples or a second light meal, bread and butter, lunch meat sandwich, milk, salad, dessert and other miscellaneous items.

The steering committee requested Mrs. Margaret Richards, a member of the hospital board serving on the committee, to seek hospital board approval of the plan at its meeting June 26.

Further investigation of the opening of satellite kitchens in the West End and Mountain areas of the county has been set aside until it has been established that they are necessary.

Committee chairmen appointed were Roland Featherman, chief psychiatric worker of the Tri County Mental Health Unit, to chair a committee to establish criteria for qualification of persons for the service and screen applicants; Atty. Todd Williams, to chair a legal committee to lay the groundwork to establish a non-profit corporation and to handle other legal matters; Arthur Weglein, to chair a financial committee to establish financial procedures and a system of accounting and control and Mrs. Sogi Soder, Stroodsbury, appointed chairman of the volunteer recruitment committee.

Many volunteers will be needed to work with the program, since all delivery is handled by volunteers. Mrs. Sylvia Kite, director of the Visiting Nurses Association of Monroe County, has been given the responsibility of gathering statistics on the potential number of clients who might be served by the meals on wheels committee.

Jack Harvey Lesoine, Jr., and Linda M. Lesoine, P.O. Box 52, Stroodsbury, R.D. 3, had made the zoning variance request.

In the second case, where a new classification was granted, John Boushell, Stokes Avenue, East Stroodsbury, requested a change from S-2 open land to an C-1 commercial area. He plans to construct a general store in the vicinity of Stokes Avenue and Roosevelt Street.

Twp. officials approve zoning amendments

STROUDSBURG — Two amendments to the zoning Ordinance No. 109 were accepted Tuesday night by the Strood Township supervisors.

The approval was made after a public hearing held at the municipal building on North Fifth Street. No opposition was made to either of the rezoning stipulations.

One change approved the conversion of an area in the vicinity of Wigwam Park along state Department of Transportation lands from a C-2 (commercial) to an R-1 residential area.

The other converted an area in the vicinity of Stokes Avenue and Roosevelt Street from an S-2 open space area to a C-1 commercial zone.

There were no objections during the proceedings, although Mr. and Mrs. Harold E. Dailey, of 6 Pauline Place, Middlesex, N.J., did request a clarification of the land involved in the change from C-2 to R-1.

About 10 people attended the special meeting conducted by township supervisor William Crooks. James Somers, secretary-treasurer of the township, joined Crooks in forming the hearing board.

Jack Harvey Lesoine, Jr., and Linda M. Lesoine, P.O. Box 52, Stroodsbury, R.D. 3, had made the zoning variance request.

In the second case, where a new classification was granted, John Boushell, Stokes Avenue, East Stroodsbury, requested a change from S-2 open land to an C-1 commercial area. He plans to construct a general store in the vicinity of Stokes Avenue and Roosevelt Street.

Tocks position blasted

Ottaway News Service

GOSHEN, N.Y. — Orange County Legislator John D. Bright took a verbal lashing here Tuesday afternoon at the county legislature's hearing on the Tocks Island Dam Project from three of his colleagues on the Tocks Island Regional Advisory Council (TIRAC).

TIRAC Chairman Stephen W. Hayes, Edwin Dietz of Port Jervis, both Orange County members of the council, and Jules Marron, Sussex County (N.J.) planning director, leveled salvos at the outspoken TIRAC member who has repeatedly criticized the $370 million project on the Delaware River.

Hayes, who has been a member of TIRAC since its inception in 1965, questioned Bright's experience and knowledge in connection with the project.

Claiming that Bright's only governmental experience before being elected to the legislature in 1969 was a town board member in Mount Hope — "A town that does not have a sewage district, water district, police department, fire department, and where planning and zoning were only updated at the urging of the county" — Hayes said, "Now with this town background, Mr. Bright has set himself up as an expert on sewage, flood control, recreation, water supply, electricity, eutrophication (pollution) and cost analysis."

Bright never consulted with Dietz or Hayes before making any of his anti-Tocks statements, said the TIRAC chairman, and neither of the pair agree with any of his positions. "Let me say that any resolutions, position papers, recommendations or comments by Mr. Bright should be considered as a minority report of the Orange County representatives (on TIRAC)," said Hayes.

Bright has asked the county legislature to go on record opposing the dam project and his resolution was the reason Tuesday's hearings were called by the legislature's Rules Committee.

Hayes said that Bright told the April TIRAC meeting that he wasn't opposed to the dam project, only eight days after he introduced the resolution on the floor of the legislature.

Alluding to the recent decision of the Pike County Commissioners to pull out of TIRAC, Marron said, "Our problems are the same. We should try to solve them together."

Four defendants convicted in trial for Barrett brawl

By GARY GROSSMAN

Pocono Record Reporter

STROUDSBURG — Four Barrett Township youths were convicted of assault and battery Tuesday by a four-man jury following a full day of defense testimony and four hours of deliberation by the jury.

Thomas Holland and Steven Nesco, of Mount Pocono, George Neff IV, of Canadensis, and Joseph Hardy, of Mountaintown, listened intently as Jury Foreman Irving Sommer announced their guilty verdicts at the end of a two-day trial.

All four were found guilty of assaulting and battering Bruce Temple of Claymont, Del., on March 18 near Fran's Motel in Canadensis.

An additional assault and battery charge against Hardy was dropped by the jury. He was found not guilty of an alleged assault on Stephen Adamski, also of Claymont, Del.

Testimony was heard from each of the four defendants in turn throughout the morning.

Nesco was the first to the stand. He said he heard there was to be a fight at a party on the Saturday in question. Nesco said he heard a few of his friends had been beaten up the night before and things were going to be settled.

He went to the scene of the incident where he saw a man running through a parking lot, chased by about five persons. Nesco ran to see what was happening, he said.

There was a person on the ground yelling his arm was hurt. Nesco said he joined the group around the fallen man and watched for two minutes as some people beat the man.

Nesco said he lost interest and left. He denied ever touching Temple.

Temple had testified a day earlier Nesco had tackled him to the ground as he fled from 15 youths "seeking blood."

Next to the stand to defend himself was 22-year-old Holland, a student at Pennsylvania State University. He said he was at the scene of the incident, but never once laid a hand or foot on Temple.

Holland said he saw Temple get kicked four times by persons he couldn't identify. Holland had been fingered by Temple as the man who kicked him in the head.

Neff, also identified as having kicked Temple, was next to the stand. The 23-year-old Neff said he too was at the scene of the beating, but had not taken part.

Nine persons at the incident were named by Neff, but none of his co-defendants were identified as attackers by the youth.

Only once did he see anyone take a shot at Temple, Neff testified. He named Paul Hawk.

Finally, Hardy was called to testify. On Monday Temple testified Hardy knelt beside him as he lay on the ground with a dislocated right elbow and threatened to break the fingers on his right hand.

True, Hardy testified, he had knelt beside the downed Temple who was "yelling his arm hurt," but only to move Temple's left hand from his face. Hardy said he wanted to see if Temple was one of the youths who had been involved in the incident the night before.

Hardy said he did not recognize Temple and told the crowd not to hurt the Delaware youth.

Following summations from three defense attorneys and District Attorney James F. Marsh, the case was handed over to the jury near 4 p.m.

It was near 8 p.m. when the jury moved back into the courtroom to deliver verdicts.

The convicted defendants were brought before Judge Arlington W. Williams and given their right to file post-trial motions within seven days.

Sentence for the four youths was deferred pending those motions or pre-sentence investigations.

Alternate to traditional system

DRBC studies sewer plan

By HUMPHREY S. TYLER

Ottaway News Service

GOSHEN, N.Y. — The chief engineer for the Delaware River Basin Commission (DRBC) revealed during Orange County Legislative hearings on the Tocks Island Dam Project here Tuesday afternoon that the commission is studying an alternative process of sewage disposal that would eliminate the need for surrounding the proposed Tocks Island reservoir with a traditional sewage collection system.

Herbert A. Hawlett said the DRBC has contracted with a Pennsylvania State University professor to find out if soil conditions surrounding the 37-mile reservoir are conducive to "spray irrigation method of waste disposal."

Spray irrigation is a system whereby sewage wastes are sprayed onto forest lands rather than being treated in conventional treatment plants and then dumped into waterways. If the ground conditions are right, the process can aid in the fertilization of the forest without endangering the health of nearby populations.

"If spray irrigation is found to be workable in some areas of the Tocks region," said Hawlett, "it could be employed as an alternative to the construction of sewer lines that would prevent waste discharge into the Tocks reservoir."

In his testimony, Hawlett rebutted critics of the project who claim the conventional sewage system proposed by the DRBC would cost $362 million.

That figure was taken from the 1967 Tocks Island Regional Environs Study (TIRSES) which proposed the prototype of the sewer system the DRBC wants to build, he said, but it was "purely hypothetical" and "should not be used in any sort of analysis of the plan."

The DRBC now estimates that the "capital costs" for the project will be about $190 million over the 50-year period during which it will be gradually constructed, he said, but that figure doesn't include the installation of local collector lines which would have to be paid for by local governments in the service area.

The DRBC wants the federal and state governments to foot 80 per cent of the $190 million while the rest would be financed by a DRBC bond issue that would slowly be paid off by users in the service area.

Many local officials testifying Tuesday called for the federal government to pick up the tab for the entire project, but Hawlett said "equitable cost distribution among all parties is a fundamental policy of the (DRBC)."

Jury to receive case

Burglary case continues

STROUDSBURG —

Testimony concluded Tuesday in the case of Richard David Miller of Stroodsbury, indicted for burglary, larceny and corrupting the morals of a minor in connection with a gas station heist April 17.

After summations by attorneys, the case goes to jury today.

Miller was reportedly linked to the burglary by a 15-year-old Stroodsbury youth apprehended by state police soon after the crime was reported by eye witnesses.

Mrs. Nancy Burnette and her husband Jesse testified they saw two men at the Texaco station at 612 North Courtland Street around 5 a.m. April 17. Burnette said he called police.

His wife positively identified the defendant as the man she saw that morning.

Owner of the station, David Pierce, said two vending machines had been robbed of their coin boxes and panel windows along the front office had been broken the day of the incident.

On the stand, Miller said he had been home all night until 7 a.m. the next day April 17 when he received a phone call for his 15-year-old cousin — the juvenile in the case.

The caller, Miss Dween Meekes, corroborated Miller's claim to the phone call, saying he answered. Miller said his cousin was gone, but later turned up at police headquarters in East Stroodsbury.

Miller's cousin appeared for the Commonwealth.

In another court matter, Tuesday, the case against John W. Thurmond of Stroodsbury was dropped when the Commonwealth's chief witness failed to appear and was reported to be in Chicago, Ill.

Thurmond had been charged with receiving stolen goods.

Fast food store proposed for E-burg shopping plaza

EAST STROUDSBURG — A fast food restaurant may be coming to East Stroodsbury.

The East Stroodsbury Planning Commission approved location plans Tuesday night for a Carroll's Restaurant, to be one of the nationwide chain, at the corner of Brown and Lincoln streets.

The proposal, presented by Kenneth Breskin, principle in Intercoast Development Corp., would be part of the Mount Vernon, N.Y., firm's package for the Pocono Plaza. Exact building plans will be submitted later.

While Breskin may have found location approval relatively easy, commission members were critical of lighting and parking areas at the plaza.

Borough residents have apparently griped to commission members about light glare from the back of the W.T. Grant's store and Breskin was told to investigate illuminating alternatives.

Member Leon Zacher contended the parking area violates borough ordinances and called for landscaping to break the large, open lot.

Paul Miller, commission chairman, pointed out original plans for "security" lights in back of Grant's be mounted on poles. Instead, they were mounted on buildings.

A variance for other light poles—extending the height to 30 feet — was also ignored by Intercoast, Zacher charged. He said poles approached 35 feet.

Breskin responded by claiming landscaping of the parking would "create an obstacle course" for motorists and cutting down luminaires five feet "would create a hell of a problem."

Intercoast leases to its tenants with the stipulation they comply with borough codes, Breskin added. He said he will return next month to present proposals on alternative lighting.

ABA approves Finley sale; Pittsburgh to lose team

NEW YORK (UPI)—The American Basketball Association approved the sale of the Memphis Pros Tuesday to Charles O. Finley and dissolved the Pittsburgh and Floridian franchises.

The sale of the Pros to Finley, who owns the Oakland Athletics baseball team and the California Seals of the National Hockey League, is subject to approval of the Memphis club stockholders and the ABA council.

Commissioner Jack Dolph said the league would play with nine teams next season and contracts of Pittsburgh and Floridian players have been acquired by the ABA.

"The ABA has acquired the property rights to the players contracts of these men and will disseminate these rights by means of a draft, which we will hold later this evening," Dolph said.

The teams will draft in inverse order of their finish at the end of the regular season, with the exception of league champion Indiana, which will pick last, and runner-up New York, which will choose next to last. Memphis gets first crack in the special draft, followed by Carolina, Denver, Dallas, Virginia, Utah, Kentucky, New York and Indiana.

The Memphis trustees will meet with Finley in Chicago

Wednesday to discuss terms of purchase.

The commissioner stated that the league had purchased on undisclosed terms the Miami and Pittsburgh franchises in order to retain the player contracts and spread them around the league to equalize ABA strength.

"Nothing that happened tonight will affect the National Basketball Association meetings in White Sulphur Springs, West Virginia later this week," Dolph said.

Dolph had promised the ABA's Board of Governors would not extend the deadline for franchise negotiations past Tuesday.

Stroudsburg High School football coach Fred Ross smiles and flashes his baby blue eyes when somebody suggests he's the one responsible. He won't take credit for the outstanding crop of payers which will graduate Thursday.

But the numbers speak for themselves. Eight members of last year's team which posted the first unbeaten season in the school's history will go on and play football in college. Five have either received full football scholarships or partial aid.

Leading the crop is All-American Art Owens. Owens, by the way, will leave some material things at Stroudsburg. The school has provided a trophy case in which all of Owens' awards are displayed. In photograph, Owens and Ross talk about the past season. Included in the case is Owens' uniform, which has been retired by the school.

Owens, who set two single-season state records, will go the West Virginia. Oddly enough, he almost took Ross with him. It seems Ross, who completed his third year at Stroudsburg, was offered an assistant coaching position at the Morgantown school. But he turned it down because he and his wife just became parents again and he felt the move couldn't come about now.

Other college-bound Stroudsburg football players are:

DOUG BROWN — The first team all-Lehigh Valley League linebacker and second team all-state will attend Arizona State on a football scholarship.

KARL UPSCHULTE — The first team all-Lehigh Valley League linebacker will go to Tempel on a scholarship.

DAN SOMERS — Named all-league as defensive tackle,

Somers will go the Syracuse on a scholarship.

LEW SILVER — Silver, another all-league selection, will go to Juniata as a pre-med student.

BRUCE DAVIS — Davis, given honorable mention as a guard on the all-Lehigh Valley League team, will go to Franklin and Marshall. Davis was also an outstanding track star.

AL MCCORMICK — The all-league quarterback will stay at home. He will go to East Stroudsburg State College.

MARK ADAMS — Adams, who also won a state championship in track and was an all-league football selection, will go to either Millersville State College or ESSC.

Mrs. Pierson wins tourney

SHAWNEE-ON-DELAWARE — Edna Pierson won the point tournament Tuesday sponsored by the Shawnee Ladies Golf Assn.

Doris Markham shot a 90 to win the Class "A" while Martha Poulen won Class "B". Adelaide Sheble won Class "C". Mrs. Pierson won low putts with 30 while Irene Worthington won associate putter.

Glen Brook ends with tourney

STROUDSBURG — Joyce Manzie won first place Tuesday in the women's nine-hole stymie tournament at Glen Brook Country Club.

Irene Rothstein was second, Betty Somers third and Jan Hertzchuck fourth. The tourney wound up a series of 20 lessons at the club.

Minor victories

STROUDSBURG — Orioles nipped Dairy Queen, 12-10, and Moose downed Vito Construction, 21-9, Tuesday in Stroudsburg Minor League play.

Jack O'Brian's

New York's Voice of Broadway

NEW YORK — Rex Harrison's son Noel's honeymooning with bride Margaret Benson while starring in his dad's old "My Fair Lady" star-role. They were wed in London a week after their son arrived, making Rex a no doubt sexier grandpa. Noel divorced model Sara Tufnel to hasten his second time around.

John Gavin and Connie Towers were the prettiest couple in the Unicorn. Because of prettiest Connie of course. The Duke of Windsor's obits lacked a doubly romantic marginal note: his abdication speech contained the words "at long last love," and the next day Cole Porter tuned in on it superbly; it's a splendid standard (from "You Never Know," which didn't run the several of its songs are among Porter's prettiest). The 28-year-old "genius" tax consultant to Joe DiMaggio and Zsa Zsa, Brian Lewis, quit double-entending for an inventive moment to create something called "micro-bonding," an advanced hairfusing technique that makes hair weaving, he hopes, obsolete.

Bob Hope plays no military favorites: addresses West Point grads Wed., Fri. stars at the Marine Corps Leatherneck Ball at the Hilton here. The Dr. of Humanities Bob rec'd at Wilberforce U. was his 20th. Alain Delon was twice at Unicorn with Ursula Udrass. Interesting, because she's presumably Jean Paul Belmondo's bird, and Jean & Alain are abeyant friends.

No delicate geopolitical problems exist between Pres. Nixon and Mexico Pres. Echeverria, who's due for all the whole White House honors next week. The tremendously popular Mexican President also will spend one day in New York. Welcome! In all the countries we've visited, we've found the citizens of Mexico and Italy by far the friendliest, no phony obsequiousness, pure cordiality. Shirley MacLaine's affec-tioning a Bowery Boys denim cap. Bit patronizing to the working class, eh? ... Bob by Baker's lordly tolerance of reporters was a revelation in the ego of a convicted fraud who still thinks he's important. Worse, they let the ex-con get away with it.

Actress Maggie Hayes (who's written a how-to book about making your own jewelry) is teaching the handicapped at the Goodwill Industries, whose gems will be sold to raise funds for that estimable organization. Monmouth Racetrack has its own bustling helicopter pad. Used by nag owners and track execs, seldom by the suckers. Africa's now so safe, Bill Holden's broken his safari camp for more dangerous geography. Checks into the Sherry-Netherland next week and Central Park's right across 5th Ave.

Shirley Chisholm in a New Jersey high school during a question period pointed and said, "The young woman in the red blouse." Red shirt replied, "I'm a young man." All he wanted to know was Shirley's opinion of his long hair. The Sick Age: British-filming flick "Group Marriage" joins in unholy deadlock four couples who thereupon swing like a pendulum do. Nixon's Presidential yacht "Julie," sold in '70 for $125,000, again for sale at $85,000. Not the one hairdo millionaire Julius Caruso bought and renamed "President Aurora" for his wife, Aurora Ruffalo, one of 7th Ave.'s best designers.

The Miss World folks want to stage their next beauty contest aboard the QE2 during a Caribbean cruise. N.J. Gov. Cahill's daughter, Regina, is now an ink-perfumed Newark Star-Ledger newshen. The Mexican gov't politely turns back visiting dirty hippie types. Good. Henry Ford's ex, Anne Johnson, finds it cheaper by the dozen: bought that many denim shirts and pants outfits at Veneziano on Mad Ave.

Author Marie Loucheim (former U.S. Ambassador to UNESCO and steeped in politics) completed the libretto for a musical about "a real sex symbol." Who? U Thant? ... J. Edgar Hoover's Washington home will become a public museum. With a vast collection of memorabilia. After the Angela Davis acquittal, educational TV channel 13 here hung up even more Angela posters. Very neutral, eh. Have a portentous quote from Nina van Pallandt's titled ex-husband when here for the Como TV shows years ago: "I am saving my earnings and living simply. Diplomatic upbringing was hardly the best training ground for survival in the commercial world of show business where sharp-sided, fast-talking gentlemen have been known to pull the carpet from under one's feet."

Ch. 5's news director in serious mien 't'other night looked much like his raffish "Masked Gourmet," which might explain why that gustatory bore's not banished. The TV news shows highlight endless banks of phones in all the instant-primary storefronts; how come the ordinary mugg who pays his bills can't get a phone, while the pols (notably slow or no pay) just beckon and they're rushed right in. It's political muscle because tinkle-execs are frightened of all politicians, in office or due to run for same.

Here's our summer doldrum: the stately and beautiful Plaza Hotel's legendary Oak Room will close after lunch and entirely every Sat. and Sun.; the other chic rooms are cutting back variously; the flavorful Palm Court also folds its open palms Sun.-Mon. Chateau Madrid will be almost the only major nightclub operating all summer as usual.

Ninth Ave. from 43rd to 46th now is known to cops and denizens as Drag Queen Boulevard. New character actor making his performing debut (as a Mafia godfather) in the "Slaughter" film is Norman Alfie, furniture manufacturer and Dallas-Mexico City jet-setter. He'd rather act than upholster.

Sorry we can't make the huge celebration June 16-18 at the Atlantic City Steel Pier — its 75th Anniversary bash; young George Hamid Jr., son of the brilliant ex-acrobat who ran it marvelously and decently for decades as a true "family" resort, is following in his dad's tidy footsteps. George Jr. claims it's the "oldest continuous theatrical center in the world."

DRBC sets disposal concept

DELAWARE WATER GAP — The Delaware River Basin Commission has embarked on a program which could lead to the use of spray irrigation to dispose of sewage in areas of the tri-state Tocks Island region.

Officials have contracted with Dr. William E. Sopper of Penn State to make a soils survey of the 450-mile region surrounding the proposed Tocks Island reservoir, including portions of six counties that drain into the 37-mile long lake. Dr. Sopper and his associates will determine if the land is conducive to the spray irrigation method.

Spray irrigation involves the distribution of treated sewage over areas of ground for purposes of disposal. The nutrients in the sewage treatment are beneficial for forest and agricultural purposes. If the method of disposal proves successful in the area, it could be used instead of constructing costly sewer lines, which could prevent waste discharges to the Tocks Island reservoir.

The findings of the survey will be integrated into the Commission's six-year program to preserve the high quality of the Tocks Island area. Dr. Sopper, who will receive $5,000 for the survey, is to report his findings by the end of the year.

Ann Landers

Shedding light

Dear Ann Landers: My husband has a cheap streak when it comes to certain things. He goes around the house telling me to keep the lights ON instead of turning them off when I leave the room. He seems to think it "saves the bulbs." I don't know where he got the idea. I read somewhere that leaving lights on, rather than turning them off and on again when you need them, will not "save the bulbs."

His habit is annoying and I'd appreciate it if you'd find out if he is really saving bulbs by letting the lights burn. Thanks, Ann.

—Lights Out Linda

Dear Linda: The man at Con Edison says this: Incandescent light bulbs are made to burn a certain number of hours. They will burn approximately this length of time whether they are on all the time or switched on and off frequently.

Fluorescent bulbs, however, are a different matter. Turning them on DOES use up a little something that eventually wears away. However, in normal household use, the life of a light bulb is NOT shortened by an appreciable amount if the bulb is turned on and off several times a day.

Dear Ann Landers: Wally and I have been happily married for two years. The prob-

Burnley officers elected

EAST STROUDSBURG — Walter J. Mikos, an officer of the Burnley Workshop since 1964, was elected president of the facility at a recent meeting of the Board of Directors.

Mikos said following the meeting that his first action as president would be to urge all citizens who have made pledges to the Burnley Workshop Building Program to fulfill those pledges.

Also elected to official positions with the workshop were Walter R. Strunk, first vice president; J. Albert Groner, second vice president; Mrs. John W. Sibley, secretary; John A. Puleo, treasurer and Frank E. Lanterman, assistant treasurer.

'Design' speakers

STROUDSBURG — The list of speakers for the "Design for Living" program to be heard over Radio Station WVPO this week has been announced:

Today — Rev. William F. J. Riu Jr., Zion United Church of Christ, Stroudsburg.

Thursday — Steve Pelechowitz, director of Monroe County Youth for Christ.

Friday — Richard M. Frantz, St. John's Lutheran Church, Scotrun.

lem is my brother-in-law, Steve, and his wife.

Steve and I went steady for a year before I married Wally. When Steve and I first started to go together I made the biggest mistake of my life. I thought I was in love with the jerk and you can guess the rest. When it became clear to me that we had nothing in common but sex I broke up with him.

Six months later I started to date Wally. I decided to tell him everything. It wasn't necessary because he already knew. Fortunately Wally was very understanding and he has never mentioned it since.

Four months ago Steve married a girl I knew in high school. I didn't know her well but she absolutely espises me. Wally and home and they refuse to come to ours. When we meet at family get-togethers she ignores me. It's embarrassing. I feel terrible about this because she makes everyone uncomfortable. Can you help me with my problem?

—Blighted Bertie

Dear B: YOU don't have a problem, your sister-in-law does. In all probability she knows of the past and feels threatened. Continue to be pleasant and maintain a discreet distance from her husband at all times. When she feels more comfortable about you she'll loosen up. Time is on your side.

Dear Ann Landers: The letter from the woman signed "Orlando" must have hit every wife whose husband has had a heart attack. Her big ox insists on drinking to excess, overeating, and ignoring the doctor's orders. She wrote pleadingly, "If you love him, girls, nag him! NAG! NAG! NAG! It can mean added years to his life." Your reply, HYRUM, Utah (UPI) — More than 23,000 people took a sleigh ride through the elk herd at the Division of Wildlife Resource's Hardware Ranch during the 1971-72 winter. A spokesman said the ranch east of Hyrum serves to feed the northern Utah elk herd during the winter and keep them away from agricultural lands in the Cache Valley.

Strict gun control keeps British violence minimal

(Editor's Note: This is the fifth in a series of articles on guns, where people get them, what people do with them and what people think about them.)

By FELIX KESSLER
Dow Jones - Outaway News

LONDON — At about 5 p.m. on May 11, the Prime Minister was chatting with members of Parliament in the House of Commons lobby when a stranger approached, pulled out a pistol and shot him in the chest.

About 10 minutes later, Prime Minister Spencer

Perceval was dead. That was in 1812 — and though it occurred 169 years ago, it was Britain's last political assassination. (The murderer, a bankrupt named John Bellingham, was convicted and hanged a week after the shooting.)

Today, it's only slightly more difficult for strangers to get close to members in the Houses of Parliament — but it's a lot harder for anyone to obtain a gun in Britain.

By strictly controlling the sale of firearms, the nation has limited the flow of weapons among the civilian population to a bare trickle. This has had a distinctly beneficial effect on the flavor of life in England. Prime Minister Edward Heath as a rule travels without a motorcade and accompanied by only a single body guard.

Occasionally hecklers pelt him with eggs or paint — in Brussels a girl hurled ink — but the outright violence that has hit politicians and other public figures in America hasn't been a threat to Heath or other British politicians.

There are, of course, numerous reasons for the overall gentler quality of life in England. For one thing, the nation lacks the rough-and-ready frontier tradition of America. For another, it has far fewer of the social and racial tensions that mark American life.

But the absence of guns also clearly plays a role and one of the most important facts is that, just as the populace is unarmed, so is the policeman.

Sociologists and police officials believe that, just as violence can beget violence, the sight of British policemen proceeding unhurriedly and unarmed through the roughest neighborhoods has, over the decades, helped mold the calm and even passive character of the people.

Because until just a few years ago the death penalty was exacted for killing an unarmed policeman, even criminals made a point of being unarmed.

There has been a sharp rise in armed robberies and violent crime throughout Britain since 1965, when the death penalty was dropped, and more criminals seem to carry guns now. But the police are still opposed to carrying guns.

Reginald Gale, chairman of the Police Federation, which represents some 95,000 of Britain's policemen, says that practically none want guns and that most would refuse to carry them if requested.

"If forced to carry them, a lot would resign," he says. "No one wants to be associated with the first policeman who draws a gun and kills an innocent member of the public."

On rare occasions, English policemen are issued guns for special missions. But only twice since 1911 have they shot to kill — and in each case a berserk gunman was the target.

In all England and Wales, with a population of 50 million, only 29 fatal gun homicides occurred in 1970, compared with 965 in New York City alone, with a population of less than eight million.

The lack of firearms occasionally is suicidal for policemen. The Blackpool chief of police was shot dead last summer when he grappled with an armed man escaping from a jewelry store holdup.

More often, the unarmed policeman has helped save lives by his cool presence and persuasive powers.

When one police constable accidentally stumbled onto a bank robbery in December of 1970, for example, he noticed two men armed with shotguns — and one was holding a baby, evidently as a hostage. Recalls the policeman:

"I drew my truncheon, pointed to the baby and then to the two raiders. We did not say a word, but they knew what I wanted. There was a pause, then one of the raiders nodded. I knew he meant I could take the baby away."

By the time the policeman returned, the robber had made off with $130,000. But no lives were lost.

Wants them off Saturday TV

Consumerette aims at vitamins

MELBOURNE, Fla. (UPI)—Dawn Ann Kurth, the 11-year-old who told a Senate committee what she thought about television commercials, hopes her consumer advocacy campaign is just beginning.

"The next thing I want to do is to get vitamin commercials taken off Saturday morning cartoon shows," she said.

"I feel if they want to advertise these vitamins they should advertise them at night where the parents can see these commercials and decide whether their kids should eat this vitamin or not. Children shouldn't have to decide for themselves."

Dawn testified before a panel chaired by Sen. Frank Moss, D-Utah, in Washington May 31 and criticized what she said were deceptive television commercials aimed at children. Her appearance drew wide news coverage and she and her mother, Mrs. Pat Kurth said the response has been overwhelming.

Dawn has received several dozen letters from across the nation and in the first week after her Washington testimony she appeared on a network television talk show. Piles of newspapers with stories of her effort filled a sofa in the living room of the Kurth house.

"It's amazing what has happened," said Mrs. Kurth. "For an average person, and that's what we consider ourselves, an average family, all this stuff, when you stop and think about it, is just unbelievable."

Dawn, sitting on a white shag rug with a fresh breeze sweeping in the living room from a golf course across the street, said the publicity helps her cause and she hopes more people will write and tell her what they think about television commercials designed for children.

"I think more things could get done if the FTC (Federal Trade Commission) and Sen. Moss and the networks and different people like that find out the public is really interested in this, and mad about these commercials that are put on Saturday morning TV shows," she said.

The poised, pretty fifth grader suggested that ads aimed at children could be improved "by telling the truth about products, and not telling the consumer or the child, whoever is watching, they should buy it because it's yummy or delicious or because it tastes like a chocolate cookie."

"Being a kid, I feel that would be interesting on commercials would be if they could tell how they made the product, and how they put it in boxes and, if they sugar coated it, how they sugar coated it."

Make him feel like he's got the world on a string!

Peck no establishment figure; film bears it out

(HOLLYWOOD UPI)—Gregory Peck stood in the center of his office, his thumbs tucked into his belt. Tieless and with his hair uncombed, he looked and sounded as if he were planning another Boston tea party.

The subject was democracy, freedom and civil disobedience. He was talking about the first picture he has ever produced, "The Trial of the Catonsville Nine."

In Peck's eyes the Berrigan brothers, the nuns and teachers involved in the 1968 destruction of draft files in Catonsville, Md., are patriots and firebrands cut from the same cloth as early American colonists.

"The sanctity of human lives, both Vietnamese and American, is more sacred to them than the laws they broke," said Peck.

"They hoped to awaken the public to their cause. Whether I agree with them is totally unimportant. I saw their action as one of great courage. They risked their reputations, freedom. They put it all on the line. Not many in this country stand for that. I think we need more such patriotism."

Because the film is controversial it was tested in New York, Boston and Los Angeles. Reviews were generally good. Even Peck is unwilling to suggest it will be a commercial hit.

"We've decided to open in small theaters and let word get out to the people who don't know that much about the Berrigan brothers," he said. "We're also going to hold it until the fall in many places when colleges reopen and exhibit it at theaters near campuses."

Peck is vaguely amused that his film has been described as a non-establishment picture made by a fixed member of the establishment.

"I don't see myself as establishment," said the tall man in his familiar baritone. "It seems like four days ago I was flat broke in Greenwich Village or working on an oil truck. I didn't know whether I should go back to work in my dad's drug store."

"But I got lucky and worked steadily as an actor for 30 years. Yes, it was mostly luck and I know it."

"The Trial of the Catonsville Nine" was filmed in eight days at a cost of only $250,000. Peck said: "We tailored the budget to suit the nature of the story. We knew it was not a mass entertainment film."

Peck's next production will be aimed at mass audiences. He will film "Dove," the true story of the 16-year-old boy who sailed around the world. He will combine fiction with a documentary story.

"The theme of youth in search of itself appeals to me," he said.

"The boy wanted to make up his own life values which is of interest to young people all over the world."

Again, Peck's project is underlined by a strong social strain. There is a message in "Dove," as powerful in its own way as his first effort.

"I like producing better than acting," the Oscar-winner said ("To Kill a Mockingbird" in 1962). "It's more of a risk, but I find myself looking forward to coming to work more than I did as an actor."

Even oak trees explode

WWII bombs still wait to go off in Britain

By BOWEN NORTHRUP
Dow Jones-Ottaway News
SEVENOAKS, England — Anybody who flubbed a shot at Knoke Park Golf Course on the morning of May 1 has a reasonable alibi. That was the day the old oak tree exploded.

"I heard the first blast at about 8 o'clock; I didn't think about it much," says Raymond West, gamekeeper for the estate that includes the links. "Then, at about 8:30 I was walking the dogs when I heard another, pretty bad, explosion. I saw this hollow oak tree on fire, and then it exploded again. Branches went flying.

"I thought, 'well, this is as close as I'm going to get to that.'"

One early bird golfer, West says, was extremely annoyed. Police, the local fire brigade and army bomb experts decided the explosions came from World War II munitions possibly stashed in the tree by home guards, the civilian volunteers organized to defend against an expected German invasion early in the war. A deteriorating phosphorus bomb apparently set off the devices in the tree.

It wasn't an isolated incident. Unexploded World War II shells, bombs and mines — some of them still live — turn up regularly around Britain at construction sites, motorway excavations, beaches and fields under cultivation. Defusing them and disposing of them is a full-time job for some military units.

Much of the lethal debris, of course, was laid down by the British themselves, chiefly artillery shells on old ranges, plus beach mines put down along the coast to repel a German invasion. But many of the old bombs and shells are German.

"You never know what's going to turn up next," said a bomb disposal expert at the 49th Explosive Ordnance Disposal Squadron at Chatterden, in southern England. The unit has on display more than 100 kinds of devices that it has been called on to "immobilize."

Most tricky are the German devices. The Nazi technicians of three decades ago were adroit at providing boobytraps for whoever might try to defuse their bombs. Some fuses go off at the slightest pressure. Others have "anti-withdrawal" devices that cause them to explode when the regular fuse is removed, however delicately. Some German bombs with "clockwork" time fuses have been found with the fuse halted only a tick from disaster.

Somebody finds a bomb in their garden, he explains, "or they tell us that the children brought it home. Or they stroll into a police station with one and say, 'This is for you.'" Peter Sumner, 21, did just that a few weeks ago at Grimsby, with a deadly butterfly bomb that he had toted seven miles in the saddlebag of his motorcycle.

Usually people are more cautious than that, which is one reason there have been no bomb deaths since 1953, when a sergeant and a corporal were killed. Some people call about rusty fire extinguishers or old auto mufflers they have found.

Britons tend to reach for the telephone when they think they have found a bomb or shell. "We get a minimum of one call a day,"

Birth rate falling off dramatically

By DIANE K. SHAH
Dow Jones-Ottaway News
For 15 years the nation's birth rate has been falling off, but never so dramatically as it fell in the first three months of this year.

Only 15.8 children were born for each 1,000 Americans, the lowest birth rate ever recorded in this country. Likewise, the fertility rate, a more significant figure that measures births per 1,000 women of the childbearing years 15 to 44, plunged to an all-time low of 71.4, down 11 per cent from the like period last year.

Not even natality experts have ready explanations.

"Either women are delaying motherhood, or they intend to have fewer children, and nobody knows which," says Norman Ryder, a sociology professor at Princeton University. It may be years, he says, before the answer is known.

Some birth patterns of the past still are unanswered. Demographers are hard put to explain why women born in 1909 produced fewer children than women born during the next 13 years. Or why women born between 1931 and 1935, who still are in their childbearing years, already have had more children — they have borne roughly 3.5

each — than their older sisters.

The times, of course, often influence fertility rates. This may partially explain why women born in 1909 who would have typically given birth during the depression years, registered such a low number of babies.

Yet women marrying between 1936 and 1945, in the depression's waning years and through World War II, simply postponed having families. This was reflected in the soaring birth rate from 1946 to 1957.

Why the birth and fertility rates began to slip in the late 1950s is still somewhat of a mystery. The contraceptive pill, most often said to be the reason for the recent decline, wasn't licensed until 1960, and it didn't come into widespread use for several years thereafter.

The pill, however, may have accounted for the 20 per cent drop in births registered in the second half of the 1960s from the first half.

Whatever the causes, zero-population-growth advocates are pleased at the results. Based on first-quarter birth figures, the average number of children estimated for women of childbearing age decline to 2.1, close to the zero-growth.

Unenforceable laws useless

Is an unenforced law better than no law at all?

Some people apparently think so, and a disproportionate number of them seem to be members of the state legislature.

There are many examples of this type of thinking, including unenforced laws against illegal games of chance to benefit charity and an all-but unenforceable law — at least in this area — against under-21 drinking of alcoholic beverages.

In both cases, legislation is pending in various nooks and crannies in the Assembly to reconstruct those laws in light of new developments and attitudes, and from all appearances they are going to pend there indefinitely.

As far as games of chance are concerned, there is hardly a week that goes by that some organization (charitable) or other doesn't send in a notice to The Record that a bingo or card party is going to be held, or that door prizes will be offered at this function or that.

Law useless

The Record doesn't print those notices, of course (it's illegal for us to do so) but those affairs are held nonetheless and there doesn't seem to be a great cry about it. Neither is there any police action. The law, then, is useless. Why not repeal it? Because, perhaps, it eases the conscience of our legislators to know there is a law on the books against gambling in various forms.

Under-21 drinking is strictly forbidden in Pennsylvania. That law is more-or-less strictly enforced, but only in this state, because New York and New Jersey allow under-21 drinking.

So if a group of 18 or 19-year-olds want to sip a beaker or two of beer, or nurse a highball or three, well it's a short trip to Port Jervis or across the New Jersey line.

Of course, there's danger in that trip, a danger underscored time and again by the fatal accidents on "Killer Rte. 209" and the equally treacherous Rte. 46. The answer, you would think, might be to stop youngsters from making that trip (a task left entirely to parents) but the solution in Stroudsburg has been entirely different, apparently.

Bus trips

According to reports, a bus makes regular weekend runs up to Port Jervis for the express purpose of ferrying youths from 18 to 20 up to that New York town to drink. When the night is done, the same bus brings them back to town.

So that law, for interested youths in this area, is unenforceable. It is axiomatic that if someone wants to drink, they are going to — an axiom born and proven during our Prohibition era.

Why not at least make it safer and amend the laws of the Commonwealth — which now allow young people to do a number of things heretofore reserved exclusively for adults — to allow them to belly up to the bar with their fellow adults. Wishing has never made a problem go away, and neither has an unenforceable law.

Haiti honors Indians

By ROBERT SVENSSON

The Indians seem to be winning a few at last. Certainly the American Indian and his culture are enjoying belated recognition throughout the world.

Latest nation to pay tribute to the "first Americans" is the little Republic of Haiti, our Caribbean neighbor. Haiti has struck nine coins, each bearing the head of a famous American Indian Chief. The coins are of 10 Gourde denomination and are minted in 999-1000 pure silver.

Because Haiti is an independent sovereign nation, these coins are legal tender, acceptable for exchange anywhere in the world.

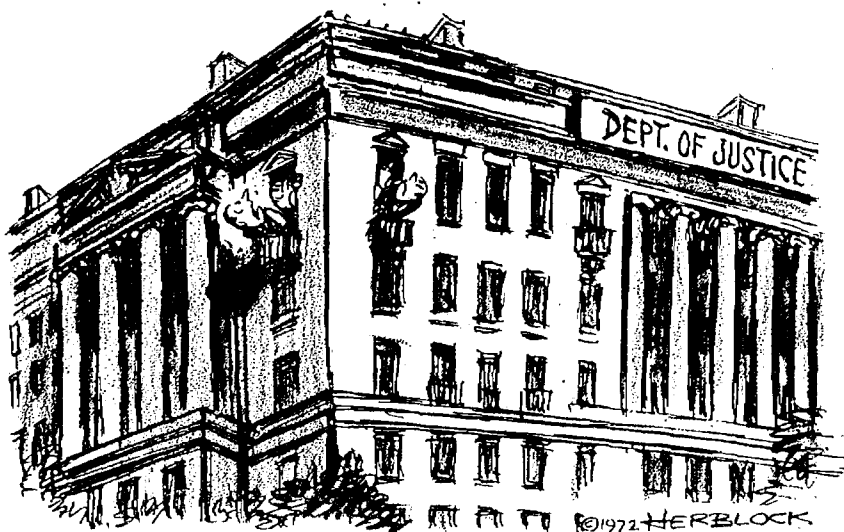

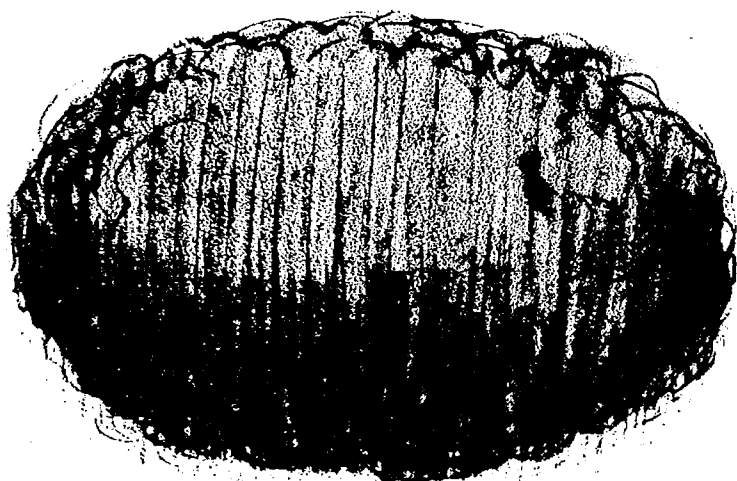

It is highly unlikely any of the Proof Issue coins will ever find their way into anything but a safe deposit box. They are just not for spending.

The little island republic of Haiti has contributed something more than a pretty coin to the world of numismatics. Each of the nine coins is truly a work of art.

The coins are issued in exquisite mirror-like proof finish. Detail in the portraits sets new standards in the art of minting and engraving.

The Indian chiefs portrayed on the nine proof coins are Red Cloud, Joseph N. Perce, Geronimo, War Eagle, Sitting Bull, Stalking Turkey, Osceola, Playing Red Fox, and Billy Bow Legs. The reverse of all nine coins displays the seal of the Republic of Haiti, and the words "Liberte, Egalite, Fraternite."

Haiti, the only French-speaking republic in the Western Hemisphere.

The Pennsylvania Story

Pennsylvania powers

Mason Denison

HARRISBURG — Next stop for Pennsylvania Democratic powers is sun-splashed (so says the Chamber of Commerce) Miami Beach next month for the Democratic National Convention from which will emerge that Party's candidate who will try to wrest the presidency from Richard M. Nixon.

Almost all of the attention following the Pennsylvania Democratic Delegation meeting here the other day centered around the selection of 45 additional delegates.

Of these, 27 were picked by the 137 previously-elected delegates and the remaining 18 were chosen by the Democratic State Committee newly headed by Gov. Milton Shapp's hand-picked patronage chief, Dennis E. (Harvey) Thiemann.

However, conspicuous by its absence was the fact that the Delegates did not proceed to pick their chairman.

According to past Pennsylvania political tradition, this honor (and, indeed, power) goes unquestionably and automatically to the Governor. It would follow, then, that Gov. Shapp would be handed the Democratic banner for the crusade to Miami Beach.

But this did not occur; at least not yet, anyhow.

It is very likely that His Excellency will indeed spearhead Pennsylvania Democrats at the Presidential-candidate picking some weeks hence.

But the point here is that it did not occur at the full-fledged Delegation meeting here the other day.

Why not?

Queried on this point, Thiemann told this column that although the subject of electing Gov. Shapp as Delegation Chairman was raised by an attendee in open meeting, it was decided that this decision would be delayed.

According to the astute young Democratic Chairman, the election of a Delegation Chairman will take place sometime between now and the end of June. Shapp may even be elected as soon as this Saturday, says the Party Chairman.

Very possible, of course. But the intriguing question still remains as to why this did not occur in automatic and expected fashion the other day.

The thinking is that Gov. Shapp was not selected chairman at the delegation meeting — because the votes weren't there at that time.

By delaying this selection, it gives Thiemann and other party chieftains time to whip the necessary votes into line. It boggles the mind to ponder that his own party would deny the governor the chairmanship.

It would appear that Gov. Shapp's grip on the Party machinery is not yet all that solid. For it should be remembered that his prestige suffered two major blows this year.

The governor came out very early for Senator Muskie as his choice for the Democratic Presidential candidate. As things turned out, the Maine contender lost Pennsylvania and shortly after bowed out as an active candidate.

Additionally, Gov. Shapp bucked fellow Democrat Frank Rizzo who was seeking the Philadelphia Mayoralty. Rizzo is now the powerful Philadelphia Mayor and plans to sit this Presidential year out.

SALT and Congress

Jeffrey Hart

WASHINGTON — In pressing editorially for quick, that is unreflective, Congressional approval of the SALT agreements by Congress, the New York Times has not balked at the statement of flat untruths. Thus a recent lead editorial stated boldly that the agreements "freeze" nuclear weapons at "more or less present levels."

It would be nice if it were true, but it isn't, and the Times statement — to use a Swiftian periphrasis for lying — says the thing which is not.

One particular feature of the agreement on offensive weapons is making waves in Congress. The agreement permits the Soviets to retain their 313 SS-9 missiles. It is being noted, so far privately, that these pack four times the payload of our largest missile, the Minuteman; and, further, that the Soviets are about to test a still more powerful missile.

In the figures given out by the Nixon Administration, SALT freezes long-range missile numbers at 1054 (U.S.) and 1818 (U.S.S.R.) The Congressmen I have spoken with consider that they could go along with this ratio.

The joker, however, is that the 313 SS-9s are counted in the Soviet total as carrying one warhead apiece. The SALT agreement allows the Soviets five years within which they can, if they are able, equip the big missiles with multiple warheads. Each SS-9 is capable of holding 20 such warheads.

If the Soviets went ahead and did this, and it is perfectly legal under the SALT terms, they would have some 1,300 regular ICBMs, plus the SS-9s, which would carry, by simple multiplication, 6,260 independently targeted warheads.

Thus, demonstrably, the SALT accords do not "freeze" nuclear levels. Strictly within the terms of this agreement, the Soviets could vastly increase their capability, achieving a four or five-to-one ratio. This, furthermore, would give them a credible first-strike and-or blackmail capability.

Furthermore, if the Soviets did decide to seize such an advantage, they would present a U.S. President with an unattractive set of options: A) either to do nothing about it, or B) to abrogate the agreement and expand our own capacity. Option B would be greeted with worldwide opprobrium, and, to say the least, would be politically unappealing. Option A would involve intimate perils.

Sensors who can perform these elementary feats of arithmetic are determined to improve the SALT agreement by attaching reservations to it. At a minimum, they would include the crucial reservation that the agreement on offensive weapons is null and void if the Soviets go ahead and equip their large missiles with multiple warheads. They do not see how the Administration could seriously object to such a stipulation, for to do so would imply that the White House is willing to accept a four or five-to-one ratio, in ICBMs, which no one really believes. These Senators are not, in the main, against the agreements or opposed on principle to the idea of nuclear parity. They merely desire to save the Administration from its own sloppy staff work.

The odds are, it is beginning to be felt on Capitol Hill, that the Administration will accept the necessary "reservations" to the agreement in order to avoid prolonged hearings and debate.

Bureaucratic battle

In retrospect

By Bert Walter

President Nixon, when he took office following a long campaign of promises, was determined to decentralize the federal government and reduce the bureaucratic maze of federal agencies.

He has been partially successful.

Based on what is happening in Monroe County, however, there seems to be a complete reversal again.

The case in point is with the Tocks Island Regional Advisory Council. TIRAC has been given the point blank indication (that's as firm as any bureaucrat could ever get) that it can no longer expect federal funds unless it became a regional planning agency with some power.

The federal agencies — especially the Department of Housing and Urban Development — are no longer content to give money to a regional "advisory" council. They want regional planning agencies.

The TIRAC executive board voted Saturday not to become a regional planning agency. As a result, however, their appropriations will drop sharply from in excess of over $100,000 down to $35,000 (the amount contributed by its members).

We can remember when the federal agencies were elated to receive a letter from TIRAC requesting funds. This was five years ago, of course. What must be remembered is at that time TIRAC was one of the only existing three federated government groups united to solve common problems.

The federal agencies loved TIRAC and didn't wince at giving the group money, because at that time these agencies were attempting to regionalize other planning units throughout the country and, so to speak, create little "TIRACs" throughout the nation.

Now, the bureaucratic chiefs entrenched in their own scheme of how the local governments should operate, have entered into their Phase 2 conspiracy (if you want to call it that) and want to create stronger TIRACs. This all is just another step of what eventually would lead to solid regional governments, which the bureaucrats would love.

Leon Zacher, former chairman of the East Stroudsburg Planning Commission, became caught in this maze of regionalization and was against it. He foresaw the bureaucratic grip in which TIRAC found itself Saturday. In its justifiable rebellion, however, TIRAC suffers to the extent that its further existence is highly in doubt.

What's the answer? The adage "you can't fight city hall" is true with the federal bureaucracy. The only thing which is left is to concentrate on the reform which Nixon has started, but even he, as President, needs help in such an entrenched Washington bureaucratic society which is a world all its own with rules all its own.

Merry-go-round

U.S. intermediaries

WASHINGTON — For eight agonizing years the U.S. has engaged in furious secret diplomacy to settle the Vietnam war. The disappointing results can now be told.

A top-secret summary reports that "a halting but gradual diplomatic movement by both NVN and the U.S. toward a negotiated settlement" began in mid-1964.

A host of intermediaries were used.

"Since very few written messages were exchanged," states the summary, "we were continually relying on the ear, predilections and prejudices of the intermediary. Since all the intermediaries, in one way or another, had a definite interest in the success of their role, all transmissions from them have to be viewed with some skepticism."

"All were, in one way or another, wary of the spread of the war, international tensions, and especially of the impact of the war on their domestic policies."

Here is an evaluation of the five main channels used to reach the right ears in Hanoi:

Secret channels

1. Rumanians, October 1966 through February 1968 — "The Rumanians were very poor reporters. They did not pick up distinctions such as talks, negotiations and settlement terms; and they repeatedly claimed that the DRV (North Vietnamese) wanted to talk directly with us; and after all signs pointed in the opposite direction, they were still representing Hanoi's demand for a U.S. bombing cessation as both unconditional and permanent. It is likely that Hanoi did not take the Rumanians seriously."

2. Swedes, November 1966 through February 1968 — "The Swedes were more active over time than any other intermediary and produced the least amount of information. The important point to note about the Swedish role was that the Swedes seemed to have more ready and frequent access to the DRV than any other nation... (But because Sweden denounced America's Vietnam policy), the U.S. never put much stock in the Swedish messages, and this track never became an important one."

3. Norwegians, June 1967 through March 1968 — "The Norwegian role was not treated with great importance by Washington, and the track was never a very active one. Nevertheless, in retrospect, the exchanges between the DRV Ambassador in Peking (Loan) and the Norwegian Ambassador in Peking (Algard) were probably the most reliable of all. Algard seems to have been a careful note taker."

4. French, September and October 1967 — The exchanges (between two unofficial Frenchmen, North Vietnam's Mai Van Bo and America's Henry Kissinger) seemed to have been handled with great care and accuracy... Kissinger for the U.S. handled the play with consummate skill, clarifying points and making interpretations that could lead to a continuing dialogue. Both Hanoi and Washington treated this channel as a major one, and yet little was accomplished."

5. Italians, February and March, 1968 — "The Italians... were not pushy about interposing themselves between Hanoi and Washington and always stood ready to break off contacts if the U.S. so desired."

Today, the U.S. is still sending secret messages to Hanoi through a variety of channels, and again, the responses have been guardedly optimistic. But Washington is skeptical.

Washington whirl

Election Odds — Our own political prognosticator, Jimmy the Greek, now rates Senator George McGovern a 10-to-1 favorite to win the Democratic presidential nomination. But in November, Jimmy considers President Nixon a 3-to-1 favorite to defeat McGovern and win reelection. The Greek's surveys show Nixon ahead in all the states he won in 1968, plus Texas, Maryland, Alabama, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi and Arkansas. Incidentally, Jimmy the Greek called the California primary closer than any other pollster. Two weeks ahead of the vote, he called it a dead heat between George McGovern and Hubert Humphrey. A week later, he called to tell us McGovern and Hubert Humphrey. A week later, he called to tell us McGovern should win by about five per cent.

Lost Millions? — The snubbing of a young California heir may have cost the bankrupt Democratic Party several million dollars. He is 25-year-old Robert Barich, who offered the party $1 million out of his own pocket and promised to raise millions more. Skeptical, Chairman Larry O'Brien declined to fly west to see him. Sen. John Tunney, D-Calif., agreed to a weekend appointment with Barich at the San Francisco airport but called it off after learning the press had been alerted. Tunney's colleague, Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., finally met Barich and found no reason to believe his offer wasn't legitimate. The Secret Service also investigated and concluded Barich seemed quite sincere. But by this time, Barich, who claims to be the heir of a huge fortune, was so furious he may not donate a dime.

New Byline — The September issue of Playboy is scheduled to carry an article by Sen. Mike Gravel, D-Alaska, called the "Corporate Pushers." It charges that major pharmaceutical firms have encouraged the use of certain kinds of amphetamines and barbiturates by youngsters. The article, ghostwritten by members of Sen. Gaylord Nelson's staff, was originally to appear under Nelson's name. When he read it, he decided it was too strong and backed off. Gravel then readily agreed to sign the article.

Drug helps heart patients

The seriousness of a heart attack is made worse by a complication known as ventricular fibrillation. With such a disorder, the major part of the heart muscle loses its rhythm and its efficiency.

Many lives are now being saved all over the world because of the remarkable electronic devices that monitor heart patients in intensive-care units in hospitals. A relatively new drug, Lidocaine, has been used with additional exciting success to reduce the frequency and severity of ventricular fibrillation.

At the San Pedro Community Hospital in California Dr. Milford G. Wyman has been using this drug for the last six years before and during an attack of fibrillation. This may indeed be a great contribution to the treatment of this difficult problem.

Hooray! Legislation and an edict by the Pure Food and Drug Administration have established a date for the total elimination of lead from all paints.

Reports from all over the world bring headlines about deaths of infants and children who eat paint peelings that contain lead.

The date and the deadline — and there is a deadline — have been established for the end of 1973. Until that ban is fixed and definite, thousands of children will unnecessarily die because of this man-made hazard.

That which I do not understand is why it will take more than a year and a half to eliminate lead from paints when such a change could, and should, be made overnight.

A single additional death is a sorrowful testimonial to the selfishness of manufacturers who persist unnecessarily in using paints with the lethal ingredient of lead.

Transportation system main convention topic

POCONO MANOR — Financing, mobility and safety of a balanced transportation system was the focus of attention at the 66th annual meeting of the Pennsylvania AAA Federation which opened Tuesday at Pocono Manor.

Over 400 delegates from the 40 AAA clubs in the state gathered to hear major addresses by Albert Kelley, vice president of communications, Insurance Institute of Highway Safety; Jacob G. Kassab, secretary of the Pennsylvania Department of Transportation; and James B. Creal, executive vice president, American Automobile Assn.

Kelley discussed highway safety from the view that efforts should be directed toward preventing losses in life and physical property.

He said this goes beyond the present efforts of public and private organizations to just prevent accidents on the highways.

He called for greater attention to be given to the behavior of drivers in addition to present methods of providing physical safety devices in automobiles.

PennDOT Secretary Kassab detailed the changing image of the state transportation department's emphasis on cost control and measures taken to "run the department as a business."

He explained that PennDOT could rank in scope with many of the 100 largest corporations in the country in terms of budget, expenditures, and complexity.

He further challenged critics who claim that PennDOT and other state highway departments are paving the country. He noted that all roads and streets occupy less than one per cent of the total land mass of the United States.

Kassab further called for completion of the full Interstate Highway System including the arterial links needed to be finished in urban areas.

He pointed out that "even with the growth of new arterial highways and expressways, roads take up no greater percentage of the nation's urban areas than they did before the auto was invented."

He explained that new highways tend to be built over old roadways in urban areas and rarely break through sections where no outdated street systems existed earlier.

AAA's James Creal completed the talks regarding transportation by castigating legislators and lobbyists who would raid the Highway Trust Fund to provide money for mass transit, particularly rapid rail transit.

He challenged the logic of such proposals when the Congress has admitted on the other hand that there is not enough money projected for the Highway Trust Fund to meet highway construction as committed at the present time.

The AAA official suggested that the motorist should not be asked to pay for transportation modes he will not be using. If such plans are activated, he said, a proportionate share of highway user taxes should be repealed.

He called upon the public to develop a direct concern for the problem and express that concern to Congress. In that regard, he noted that too few people are aware that most mass transit plans are based on the experiences of New York City and are not applicable in other areas.

Creal stressed that many urban rail transit plans will actually increase congestion rather than reduce it because "there has been no sound land use planning in connection with these new transportation systems."

He called for increased research by industry and government to develop better ways to move people and goods so as to reduce congestion. He said this must be done while remembering that America's preferred life style centers around the individual mobility and freedom that highways provide.

The state AAA convention will conclude today with the election of officers for the coming year.

Milford artist in exhibit

MILFORD — Ada Rosario Cecere, Milford and New York artist, was one of 75 persons selected to exhibit work in oil, water color and graphics, by the national Association of Women Artists Foreign Traveling Exhibition.

The exhibition took place earlier this year in Italy.

The first exhibition hung for a month in one of the galleries of the "Palazzo Vecchio" in Florence. The second was in the Villa Comunale Gardens, Naples.

The exhibition was sponsored by the commune of Florence and the American Cultural Center of Florence and Naples. The purpose of the event was to foster good will and friendship between Italy and the United States.

Mrs. Cecere is president of the Pike County Arts and Crafts Show, held in Milford every summer.

Active in the art world, she has received numerous honors for her paintings and oil, pastel and graphics.

She has had seven one-man shows in New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania.

She has received awards from the Allied Artists of America, the American Artist's Professional League, the Knickerbocker Artists and the National Association of Women Artists.

Pocono Lake youngsters win junket to California

POCONO LAKE — "That once-in-a-lifetime" trip will come early for two Pocono Lake residents. As a matter of fact, the pair will embark on a trip which many people hope will become a reality some day.

For Scott Argot and Billy Dougherty, the dream has blossomed into a real-life experience. And it will encompass a five-day, all expenses paid tour of Southern California's most famous spots.

The itinerary includes a trip to Marineland, Sea World, Knott's Berry Farm, Hollywood, and a whole day at Disneyland.

The boys were named winners of an eight-week popularity contest conducted at Hungry Ed's IGA Grocery Store, Route 940, Pocono Lake.

The local business was just one of hundreds across the country which participated in the contest sponsored by its parent organization, the Independent Grocer of America food chain. In all, the national chain will be sending 800 youths on the western fun plan.

Twenty-four boys from the Pocono Lake area competed in the contest. The participants received popularity votes as registered by the customer. Customers received stamps for each 10-cents worth of merchandise and then were deposited in ballot boxes according to the youth selected by the customer.

Argot, son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Argot, received 77,396 votes to take first place. Dougherty amassed 76,327 votes for runnerup position. He is the son of Mrs. June Dougherty, of Pocono Lake.

The contest which was open to boys between the ages of 10 to 14 inclusive, opened April 10 and ran to June 3.

Ed Lewis, proprietor of Hungry Ed, said the boys "did a fabulous job." He said they worked very hard and the competition became very keen.

The Tobyhanna Volunteer Fire Co., tallied the hundreds of thousands of vote recorded.

C.R. Kehler new GOP chairman

EASTON — Carl H. Kehler, of Easton, was elected chairman of the Northampton County Republican Party at an organizational meeting held at the county court house Monday night.

Kehler defeated his opponent, Eugene J. Mullen, of Bangor H.D. 3, by a vote of 109 to 23.

Kehler had the endorsement of Mrs. Shirley Leberman, the outgoing chairman, who had decided not to seek reelection, and was the choice of a screening unit of the county Republican Executive Committee.

Mullen had charged that party leaders had "pressured" Edwin M. Weikel, of Palmer Township, to drop out of the race and replaced him with Kehler.

Both Weikel and Mullen opposed the committee's choice of Kehler and in April issued a joint statement, calling Kehler's backers "dictatorial politicians."

State to receive 14 acres for park in Carbon County

ROCKFORD — A presentation which may serve to activate the Lehigh River Gorge State Park as an ongoing project will take place at 2 p.m. today when Dr. Maurice K. Goddard, secretary of the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Resources, will be given a deed for approximately 14 acres of land by John M. Adams, president of Blue Ridge Real Estate Co., Blakeslee.

The land being deeded by the company to the Commonwealth is in the vicinity of Rockport in Lehigh Township, Carbon County.

It lies within the proposed Lehigh River Gorge State Park which is to extend 30 miles along the Lehigh River from Jim Thorpe to the Francis Walter Dam above White Haven, some 7,000 acres in Carbon and Luzerne Counties.

The state Department of Environmental Resources noted on April 9 of last year that the development of the park would begin when state funds are available.

The federal government has agreed to provide 50 per cent of the cost of land acquisition, from funds of Federal Land and Water Conservation Agency.

The state presently has no funds to start on its own, and taking title to the 14-acre tract will make it eligible for the federal support.

State Sen. Fred Hobbs, of the Schuylkill-Carbon district, who has been active in seeking to have the necessary funds included in the state budget now being considered by the state's General Assembly, is expected to attend the ceremony.

Also expected to attend the ceremony are Conrad Lickel, director, Bureau of State Parks; William C. Forrey, assistant director; representatives of the Carbon County Commissioners; the Carbon County Planning Commission, and the Lehigh River Restoration Assn.

Opening lead — queen of clubs.

When there is a sure way of making the contract, declarer should not adopt any other method of play that would jeopardize it. The principle is of course self-evident, but the fact is that players occasionally breach it without intending to do so.

Take this case where West led a club. Declarer won the queen with the king and tried a heart finesse, the jack losing to East's king. Back came a club, won by West with the ten, and another club lead forced out the ace.

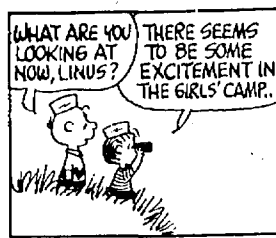

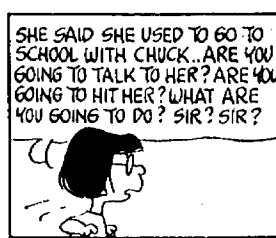

Declarer led a heart to the queen and West showed out. Forced by the heart situation to turn his attention to diamonds, declarer led the queen from dummy and finessed, whereupon West took the king and cashed two clubs to put the contract down one.

South was undoubtedly unlucky, but, even so, the outcome was his own fault. He could have insured nine tricks at the start by attacking diamonds instead of hearts, and he should not have allowed himself to be sucked in by the attraction of dummy's hearts.

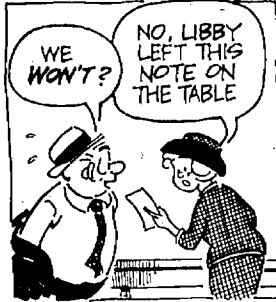

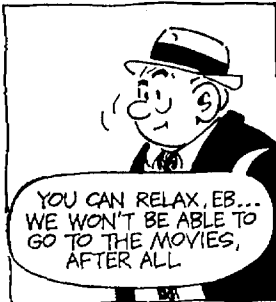

All he had to do was lead a spade to the ace at trick two and return the queen of diamonds, planning to finesse. Win or lose, he would make at least nine tricks against any distribution.

The early heart finesse opened the door to defeat — if by any chance East had the king and the suit was unfavorably divided — and hence should have been avoided.

In effect, South allowed himself to be diverted from his goal because he happened to be in his hand at trick one and found it more convenient to take a heart finesse than a diamond finesse. Had he considered the play more carefully, he would have appreciated the importance of establishing the diamonds first.

Teen Forum

By Joan Adams

TENDER: (Q.) Do you think it's nice of girls to keep talking about their boy friends in front of girls who don't get dates or calls from boys? It really hurts me and makes me feel left out.

No Dates in Indiana

(A.) You can't control what other people talk about, but you can try to be less sensitive yourself!

I admit that many people are not too perceptive about what they talk about and its effect on others. A teen-age girl with a boy friend often can't see that she bores others talking about him. When you are in the audience of such a girl she is oblivious to you. You are just someone for her to talk to about her boy friend. If it is too painful stay away from her.

Don't worry about hurting her feelings by avoiding her. She'll find somebody else to talk to.

DANCE TALK: (Q.) At a dance, when I ask a girl I don't know to dance she usually says yes. But after the dance she usually either says "Thank you" and walks away or she starts talking to her girl friends.

I think she should at least say something. What should I say to her? Or should I just hold on to her or something?

Deserted in Pennsylvania

(A.) If you've asked someone else's date to dance with you, you should not keep her for more than one dance at a time. It is also impolite to ask her to dance with you too often.

Before you return her to her date, introduce yourself. She will then tell you her name. If you do not hear it or she talks too fast ask her again so you will be sure. Then thank her for dancing with you and if you are really interested ask for her telephone number. After that return her to her date.

You may know that the girl is there alone or with a group of girl friends. If so, and you want to keep her a while, say immediately after the music stops, "Let's dance again." If you don't want to dance with her again, return her to where you found her.

ADOPTION: (Comment): I read your column every day and I agree with just about everything you say. But there is one issue I strongly disagree with you on. That is your advice to unmarried girls to put their babies up for adoption.

Sure, the agencies, doctors and some of the people who have adopted children think adoption is the perfect answer. But what about the real mother? How will she feel a few years afterward? If she is any kind of a person she'll worry about how her baby, her own flesh and blood, is being treated, if he's been sick or even if he died.

My aunt adopted out her baby 14 years ago and has worried about it so much that last year she had to go to a mental hospital. Abortion would solve problems like this.

Against Adoption in Ohio

(A) It is not usually possible to say exactly what sends a person to a mental hospital. Mental sufferers often talk about one thing to cover another one up. This may have happened to your aunt.

To my way of thinking, a mother who lets her child be destroyed is likely to be unhappier than one who loses it — alive — to another mother.

Erma Bombeck

'Locked door'

Ever since our children went into their "locked door" syndrome, our house has all the charm of a mental institution.

The entire house used to be open range. Anyone could graze anywhere and still be in plain sight. Not anymore.

The other night I knocked loudly on the bedroom door.

"Who is it?" asked a voice.

"It's Mama."

"Who?"

"MAMA!"

"Are you sure?"

"Yes."

"What do you want?"

"Open the door. I want to talk to you."

"Did he send you to get his records back?"

"No. Unlock this door."

The door opened a crack and one eye peeked out. "Oh, it's you."

"You were expecting Donnie Osmond? Come to dinner."

The door slammed shut.

Following a telephone wire, I traced the next child to a locked closet.

"I know you are in there. The telephone wire is warm. Come to dinner."

There was silence. Then a whispered voice said, "She's listening. I'll call you back."

The next one was a toughie. I found him behind a locked door in the garage playing his drums.

"Do you hear me?" I shouted. "It's dinner."

"Who told you I was here?"

"The neighbors."

"Is that all you want?"

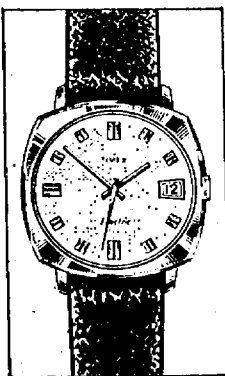

At dinner I asked them,

Called to account

NEW YORK (UPI) — Within the next 10 years there may well be a nationwide accounting process or institution to assess the successes or failures of the nation's schools, Sidney P. Marland Jr. predicts in "Teachers College Record," journal of Teachers College, Columbia University.

Marland, U.S. Commissioner of Education, indicated that the accounting agency would evaluate both the structure and content of the educational process and address itself to some of the most pressing problems in education, reporting its findings for public scrutiny.

In Memorium 51

IN LOVING memory of our beloved husband and father, William L.
Kresge, who passed away June 14, 1972.
A token of love and remembrance,
A love one will never forget!
His memory to us is a treasure.
His loss, a life long void.
We saw him smiling like a flower,
We could not help him stay,
We nursed him with tender kindness.
Until God took him away.
For he was the kind of one,
No one was ever more dear.
The dear smile and a heart of gold.
The first loved one this world could behold.
Sadly missed by Wife,
Carrie and Children

Can your bread
pass this test?

Flex Test
Feel Sunbeam's
flexible freshness!

Batter Whipped Sunbeam®
dares to be compared!

Why is Sunbeam called "The Fresh One?"

Because it's made differently. For finer texture . . .
velvety softness.

Sunbeam is Batter Whipped Bread. Mixed in small batches. Actually whipped, like cream. Air holes (where staling air can hide) are whipped out.

Result: bread that looks fresher. Feels fresher.
Toasts fresher. Tastes fresher.

Compare Batter Whipped Sunbeam with the bread you're now using. Let your eyes, your sense of touch — and your taste — convince you that Sunbeam is a truly superior bread. Try a loaf, today.

Governors set tone of disagreement

Democratic platform future cloudy

HOUSTON (UPI)—If wide-spread disagreement among the nation's Democratic governors reflects similar division within the party generally, the still unwritten party platform may provoke intense debate at the Democratic National Convention in Miami Beach.

The party's 30 governors met during the National Governors' Conference here last week to draw up a blueprint of the positions they want their standard bearer to take against President Nixon this fall. They drafted a 27-page proposal recommending action on 10 major domestic problems from the economy to the environment.

But on the day it was to have been presented by the governors at a meeting of the Democratic National Committee's Platform Committee, Maryland Gov. Marvin Mandel, then chairman of the governors' caucus, was forced to discard the document.

His last minute scuttling of the draft recommendations, according to a source among the governors, followed intense debate over whether to add a number of additional proposals, primarily an end-the-war plank and an anti-busing provision. Other governors had urged positions on gun control, civil rights, and reduced defense spending, the source said. None of these topics were included in the privately circulated final draft, which was made available to UPI.

Mandel, who was elected chairman of the full conference, decided to kill the proposal and instead to make a general oral presentation before the committee with few specifics "just to keep peace among the governors", one participant said.

"We found it was almost an impossibility to obtain agreement among the 30 governors," an empty-handed Gov. John C. West of South Carolina told Harvard Professor Richard Neustadt, the platform committee's acting chairman. Eight members of the committee had come to Houston solely to receive the governors' recommendations.

West, chairman of the governors' platform committee, told newsmen later that a "formal document" would be presented to the committee within a few days, but sources said it would take much longer "before we can iron this out".

On the surface, it appeared that the governors simply could not agree on a few issues. But the incident may have exposed deeper divisions that plagued the governors throughout their three-day conference. These divisions may rumble to the surface again when Democrats meet July 10 in Miami to select a presidential candidate and shape the positions upon which the nominee must stand.

If Sen. George S. McGovern of South Dakota wins the nomination divisions now evident among the governors may collide with the positions McGovern staked out in the party primaries.

For example, as Wisconsin Gov. Patrick J. Lucey—a McGovern supporter—was calling for forced busing "a phony issue", most of the southern governors were insisting that it is "an essential issue" and that the party must oppose it.

Many governors argued the Vietnam War had no place in their proposal, seeking to restrict it to domestic matters directly concerning them. Some expressed differences with McGovern's call for total U.S. withdrawal prior to release of American prisoners of war.

Reduced defense spending was one of the key concerns among southern and border state governors who expressed reservations about McGovern's candidacy. Most governors also felt that it would have been impossible to agree on a specific level at which defense costs should be cut.

"It's a safe bet," said one governor, "that our debate here will be resumed again at the convention."

Graffiti — how one city is trying to get rid of it

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Tokay should have known better.

His friends told him they didn't want to see any graffiti on the walls of the community recreation hall at Temple University.

But Tokay couldn't resist it. He scrawled his name across the front door of the building with spray paint.

"He got beat because of that," said Frank Kravitz, director of the Temple program. "Members of the 12th and Oxford Street gang made him run the graffiti — that's where they line up and beat him with sticks. I haven't seen him around lately."

There were 10,000 graffitiists in Philadelphia—with a hard core numbering less than 20. They cost the city at least $2.5 million a year.

The school district is ready to spend $1 million this year to fight graffiti. The Southeastern Pennsylvania Transportation Authority (SEPTA) is spending $200,000 now just to keep up with the graffitiists.

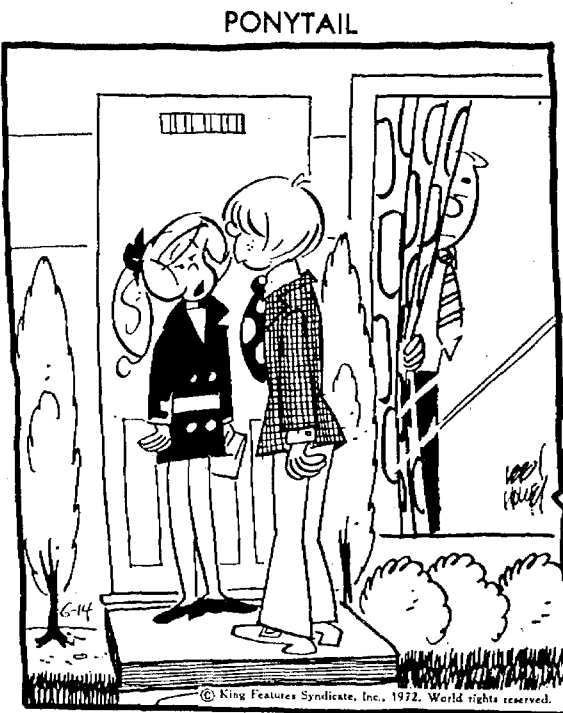

Frank Kravitz of Temple is optimistic that graffiti is on its way out in Philadelphia.

"I think it's on the decline," he said, "the press hasn't been giving these kids much publicity and they haven't been making heroes out of them. Not all of the kids are going through that kind of stage any more."

Tom Hickey of SEPTA shares Kravitz' view, but for different reasons.

"A man from New York was in here the other day," Hickey said. "He told me it looks like it's tapering off here and wanted to know why. What could I say? I told him 'they ran out of walls, that's about all.'"

"I really don't think you'll enjoy kissing me good night, Hubert... my father is watching!"

"Graffiti capital"

That's probably the most unique way people in this city, "Graffiti Capital of the Nation," are trying to solve the problem of urban scrawl.

There are indications that the combined efforts of police, community workers and city officials are having an effect and graffiti is on the decline.

"All I can say," said Sgt. Anthony McGuire, head of the 20 man police graffiti squad, "is that a lot of walls that we've seen cleaned have stayed clean for a longer period of time."

McGuire's squad has made 399 arrests since its formation one year ago.

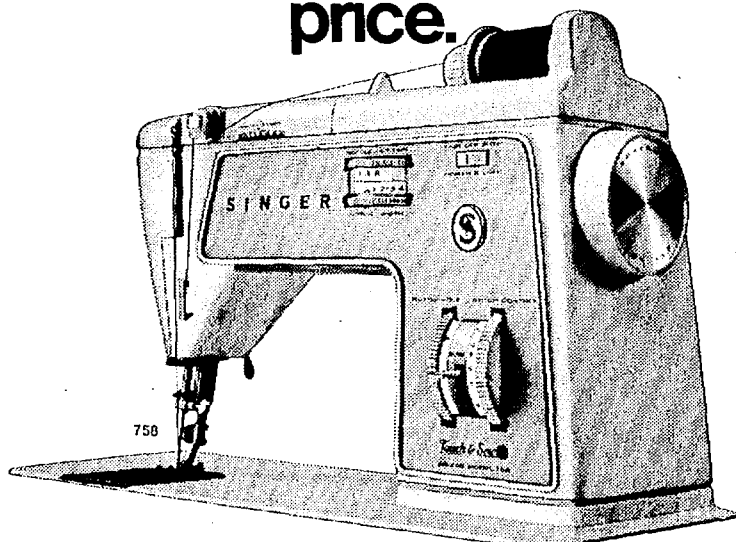

"Their environment"

"The most impressive figure," McGuire said, "is the small number of repeaters."

We've had all these arrests and only 10 or 12 repeaters. Most of these kids don't see anything wrong with it. They've seen it all their lives. It's such a part of their environment."
